time without taking that which should be spent studying. Few boys or girls like to be called book-worms and still fewer are book-worms, but even so the books should not be allowed to get dusty. It is also true that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so everyone make up your mind to do more studying for the rest of this school year.

THE NORTH CAROLINA GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND SCHOOLS

The 1935 North Carolina General Assembly began on January eighth. After an exciting speakership race, Congressman Robert Johnson was elected head of the House and Senator A. H. (Standy) Graham, speaker of the senate. On Thursday night, January seventeenth, Governor Ehringhaus read his message to a joint session. He spoke mainly on the coming year and he favors giving the teachers of the public schools a fifteen per cent raise. What will the legislators do about this?

Already a bill has been offered to provide pensions for teachers disabled so they cannot teach, if they are more than 50 years old and have taught in the State for thirty years. The appropriation committee has been kept very busy. It has requested $186,000 more than the recommended figures of $114,700 for the division of vocational education, by the Department of Public Instruction. This money, with the aid of the Federal and County appropriations, would allow hom economics, business, and commercial courses to be taught in more of the public schools.

Another bill which would increase the safety for the country children is the bill which would prevent minors from driving school buses and would result in all buses having steel bodies and non-shattering glass.

These are the bills so far presented to the assembly which would affect schools. At this critical time, what will the Legislature do towards educating the boys and girls of North Carolina?

HENDERSON-WARRENTON BASKETBALL GAMES

The boys and girls basketball teams of the Henderson High School went to Warrenton last Friday afternoon. The girls lost with the score 32-23; the boys won 24-19. Several Sophomore girls played in the game.

Examinations! Just the idea of them brings groans from many pupils. Everyone wonders why the students did not think of examinations last fall when they were attending some show or reading a book or listening to the radio. Maybe they did but examinations seemed so very far off that no attention was paid to them. It might be a good idea to imagine that the finals are just around the corner and start preparing for them right now.

In order for a pupil to get the most out of his lesson, he must study hard and try to put his mind on the subject. Studying does not mean memorizing what is in the book; it means to understand, to see through a thing, and to wake up examples other than those in the book.

There are many boys and girls who did not use their time to the best advantage, or who did not pass, or who did not study; enough in the first semester, which ends tomorrow. Although it is a bit late for New Year Resolutions, these boys and girls can resolve to put more time on studying and a little less time with that girl with brown hair or that good looking boy. Naturally it is more pleasant to be with the girl or boy friend than to study, but there is enough time to spend having a good time.

MIDDLEBURG TEAMS ARE TO PLAY HERE

Middleburg will meet Aycock teams here this evening at 7:30 o'clock on the High Price court in a double-header card, it was stated from the Middleburg school.

Middleburg has a formidable team and is pointing to win over the Aycock aggregations.

School has been suspended at Aycock until Thursday on account of illness and poor attendance. Whether this will affect the games or not remains with the athletic authorities at the schools.

Middleburg lost a doubleheader last Friday to Bethel Hill, there the girls dropping their game 41-24 and the boys by a close 28-25 score. In a previous meeting here, the county team split with Bethel Hill, the girls losing 20-12, the boys won their contest 34-21.

Henderson will meet Middleburg here Friday night on the High Price court.

Girl Student In State Is To Get Washington Trip

New Bern, Jan. 28.—In accordance with a resolution adopted by the Forty-third Continental Congress of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, last April in Washington, the North Carolina State Regent, Mrs. W. H. Belk, of Charlotte and Mrs. T. C. Turnage, of Farmville, chairman of the state, D. A. R. committee on student organization, are announcing state plans for the "Ruth Bryan Owen Plan for Good Citizenship" which provides for a yearly patriotic pilgrimage to Washington of a girl from each of the 48 states, selected from the senior classes of the public schools and the D. A. R. approved schools as an outstanding student from that state.

This plan for this year in North Carolina has been approved by Clyde Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction, who heard its details from Mrs. Turnage and declared that he would be glad to cooperate with the D. A. R. members in any way that he can through his department to make it a success.

Competitors for the honor of being the senior girl chosen from North Carolina to represent this State in Washington this spring will be chosen in each town of the State where a D. A. R. chapter is located. The choice must be made by the student body of the respective schools, approved by the faculty.

The following qualifications will be used as a basis for the selection of the local winners: points of character, such as honor, integrity, courage and patriotism; record of scholarship, leadership and service. She will be required to read the United States Constitution, memorize the Salute to the American Flag, the America's Creed, and the song "America" and "The Old North State."

Legislature Far Ahead Of Recent Sessions As Its Fourth Week Opens

legislature. As evidence of that it is only necessary to point out that one of two speakers for the Fair Tax Association, who appeared before the committee in opposition to the tax, struck a defeatist attitude when they told members of the committee, that they had no doubt already made up their minds to levy the sales tax. One speaker said, "Nothing we can say will alter your attitude."

Good Progress Made. The joint appropriations committee legislation. Stevenson—Wednesday and Thursday

sped on its way. Although it did not complete its scheduled 50 hearings, it did get 37 of them out of its way, and thereby confounded its critics, who had said that it would not complete half its slate. Most observers are inclined to think that the committee will increase total appropriations. Some of them set the approximate increase at $9,000,000. This committee also resumes its hearings tomorrow.

Formulation of a driver's license bill by a sub-committee on roads was an outstanding performance of the work. The committee bill is expected to be passed substantially as written. It is a comprehensive measure, a forerunner of legislation to increase the highway patrol, in whose hands enforcement of the measure will be placed. Indications are that the patrol will be increased to a probable strength of 200. The driver's license bill provides for free licenses to be issued until November 1, when the bill is scheduled to become law, and after that date would assess a fee of one dollar for private operators' licenses, good for an indefinite period, and a two-dollar annual charge against chauffeurs.

Increase Workmen's Law

A bill increasing the scope of the workmen's compensation act was introduced by Representative Gardner, of Cleveland. It has the approval of the State Insurance Department and the governor. The bill would require all insurance companies writing that type of insurance in the State to accept all undesirable risks insurable under the compensation act and would place occupational diseases under the act. In the event that the companies withdraw from the State, it would result in the State entering the compensation insurance field by setting up a fund for that purpose. The bill, which most observers believe will be approved, would settle the difference now existing between the companies and the insurance department.

Other Measures.

Bill to compel parents to have their children vaccinated against diphtheria, reducing automobile license costs, charging fraternal, charitable, and religious organizations a $15 fee for a charter, providing a $25-monthly pension for school teachers who have taught 30 years or more, establishing a tuberculosis sanatorium in western North Carolina, abolishing nudism and obscene literature, memorializing Congress to help increase the price of potatoes, and forbidding county chairmen from becoming candidates for office were among other pieces of legislation offered during the week. The proposal to compel fire insurance companies to pay the face value of policies in cases of total loss was voted down by the House Insurance Committee.

It was a quiet week. Not a single bill was introduced in either House Saturday. If, however, the finance and appropriations committees continue their present burst of speed their bills will be ready far ahead of expectations. Then will come action in the legislature.

Three Bills Up Tonight

Only three bills will confront the legislature on its calendar when it meets tonight at eight o'clock to start another week of legislation. All three are on the House calendar. The Senate will start from scratch, its calendar being a blank.

Among the House bills is Representative Charlie Jones' bill to permit superior court judges to sentence to life imprisonment instead of to the electric chair those prisoners found guilty of capital crimes when and if the jury recommends mercy. The bill was reported unfavorably in committee by a vote of 10 to 8. Tam Bowie opposed it bitterly. On that occasion Jones looked at Bowie, saying, "I know you'd do that. They have long been political enemies. Last week, however, when the bill came to the floor, Bowie arose from his seat, explained that Jones was unable to be present because he had to attend a term of superior court, and asked that action on the bill be deferred until his return. Tonight, when Jones returns, Bowie's gallantry will be gone. He will fight against the measure, Jones would like to abolish capital punishment altogether.

Hitch-hiking Representative Bowers' potato resolution is on the book, too. Members of the committee considering the bill couldn't see eye-to-eye with Bowers, or maybe it was the potatoes. Any way, they added sweet potatoes to the resolution, which asks Congress to raise their price and reported it favorably.

Representative Norwood's (of Sanly) bill repealing the $10 license tax on stallions and jacks in service is on the favorable calendar. It has no reference to members of the legislature.

Galleries Fill

Don't get the impression, however, that it is all that will come before the legislature. Remember, it's Monday night. That's the night when the galleries are filled with spectators, and applause welcome to a legislator's ears. It is most frequent. Some have been known enough to say that many wait until Monday night to introduce bills and make speeches. "Mr. President"—the very sound of it is enhanced by reason of a gallery filled with curious spectators. Dr. Burrus, senator from Guilford, may loosen up and introduce a bill at last. And then there's the striking figure of Senator John Sprunt Hill. No doubt but that his appearance here really looks like a senator—had something to do with that front seat he occupies. You know it doesn't do a bit of harm to dramatize the Senate. It could not be learned today whether Senator Hill will use that megaphone in the Senate tonight. It was presented to him at that dinner given by Senator Horton the other night.

Wagner And Lewis Push Social Laws

inence in short order generally will be found to have his name identified especially with some particular line of legislative activity.

For example, one thinks simultaneously of Senator Carter Glass and the country's banking system; simultaneously of Senator Morris Shephard and the late prohibition experiment; simultaneously of Senator Hiram W. Johnson and of opposition to American participation in world court proceedings; simultaneously of Representative Hamilton Fish and investigation of communism's spread throughout the land; simultaneously of Representative Wright Patman and the soldiers' bonus; simultaneously of Representative James M. Mead and postal problems.

And one thinks of Senator Robert F. Wagner and of Representative David J. Lewis particularly in connection with social security concerning which we have been hearing a vast deal recently.

INTERESTING INDIVIDUALS

Senator Wagner of New York and Representative Lewis of Maryland partners for several years in their respective congressional chambers in a determined campaign for unemployment insurance, old age pensions and other forms of protection for the masses are a pair of the most interesting individuals on Capitol Hill.

Each of them "roughed it" in youth but in very different ways. The German-born senator whose parents brought him to the United States in his infancy did his boyhood "roughing it" in the streets of Manhattan.

The representative, born in Pennsylvania, a Welsh miner's son, picked coal as a breaker lad from the age of nine, and later toiled under ground until he was 23.

The senator knew hardships plenty. Nevertheless, educational opportunities, which he fought to gain, existed in his big home town. With degrees from the College of the City of New York, and the New York law school, Wagner rose rapidly at the Gorman bar to the supreme and then the appellate bench—a successful practitioner and influential politician as a comparative young man.

The representative never spent a day in a school room. He learned to read in a Bible class. Two years after reaching his majority however he, too, was admitted to the bar. One of the most erudite orators in Congress spoke of the Marylander not long ago as the best Latin scholar he ever met.

May Permit Whisky For Its Revenue

set up a liquor control plan in its place should be proposed right now it would be decisively defeated. But even some of the most ardent personal and political dry members of the assembly admit that more and more thought and discussion is being given to the legalization of liquor as a possible new source of revenue, and that 60 or 70 days from now there may be a possibility of getting a liquor control law through the assembly.

There are some who believe that an alliance has already been formed or is in process of being formed between some of the real estate men of the State, the merchants and the wets for the primary purpose of increasing State revenue, so that other taxes, especially the sales tax and property taxes, may be reduced. One thing that seems to have given impetus to this idea is the report heard from Charlotte to the effect that Robert Lassiter, a large property owner and real estate man, has started an active drive for the revenue of liquor both to increase the revenue of the State and to bring about better moral conditions. The fact that several of the speakers for the North Carolina Fair Tax Association advocated legalizing liquor as a means of getting more State revenue and as a partial substitute for the sales tax, in its hearing before the joint finance committee, a few days ago, caused some observers to think that this organization might advocate the legaliz-vation and Development. In the course of a speech he was making before the North Carolina Society of Engineers which met here last week, Present indications are that if Fanton is not satisfied with the salary he is now receiving, his resignation will be accepted by the Department of Conservation and Development, and that there are plenty of applicants for the job now that the State is paying. There intimations today that Fanton might be asked for his resignation if he does not resign voluntarily, on the grounds that any State employee who publicly recommends a strike on the part of public service employees, paid from tax revenue, is bound to be out of sympathy with what the State is trying to do that his services can not be any further service to the State.

While engineers, one of the highest ranking engineers of the Highway and Public Works Commission, said today, "We also feel that the remarks of Fanton were ill-timed and unbecoming and that the method he recommended for getting salaries increased, namely a strike, is entirely contrary to all good sense, and that the suggestion will retard, rather than assist, any progress toward a higher salary schedule."

Chairman Capps and Public Works Commissioner, declined to be quoted directly on the grounds that the remark was made by an engineer employed by another State department. However, indicated that he thought the suggestion for a strike by public service employees—that is, highway engineers—in order to try to get higher salaries was rather ill-timed, especially since it applied to the highest paid employees.

"While we feel that the salary schedule for engineers is too low and think that it should be increased more than 15 per cent if at all possible, we realize that we, as must take into consideration the ability of the people of the State to pay taxes and the ability of the General Assembly to find the revenue," one of the highest ranking engineers of the Highway and Public Works Commission, said today. "We also feel that the remarks of Fanton were ill-timed and unbecoming and that the method he recommended for getting salaries increased, namely a strike, is entirely contrary to all good sense, and that the suggestion will retard, rather than assist, any progress toward a higher salary schedule."

When asked if the merchants association would oppose any move to repeal the prohibition law and legalize liquor, there are undoubtedly individual merchants who favor legal liquor and a liquor law, just as there are many who are ardent dries. But I feel certain that the merchants association as an organization will not, at any time, advocate or join in the advocacy of legal liquor for the purpose of revenue or anything else."

Famous Quartet To Sing Here Friday (Reported to the Dispatch) The Knoxville College Quartet of Knoxville, Tenn. will appear in a recital at Henderson Institute Auditorium Friday night Feb. 1, 1935. This group is a quartet of mixed voices with accompanist and is recognized by many music critics as the finest group of singers of its kind on the road today. Each member of the quartet has a rich full voice of rare quality and the blending of voices in their ensemble work is very pleasing.

They present a varied program of high class music. Knoxville College singers never give the public cheap music. All of their selections are of a high order and presented in such a way as to please the popular audience. Their program is composed of classical, semi-classical, and Negro Spiritual selections.

The graduate member of this group who is also the manager and field director is Mattie Belle Hall. She was graduated at Knoxville College last June with a major in Voice. She is without doubt one of the best singers the college has ever produced. She takes the soprano part in the quartet. A music critic who heard her in Chicago last winter said "she has everything a singer could desire, range, quality, power, control and expression. She has a sweetness of tone and an attractiveness of personality rarely found."

We hope that many people will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this group of singers as we feel that they will give us a rare musical treat. The Institute is inviting all lovers of music to attend this recital as there is ample room in the auditorium to afford reserve seats to any one desiring them.

Undergoes Operation Floyd Wilson, of Townsville, underwent an operation at Maria Parham hospital today, and was said to be doing very nicely.
