TODAY'S YESTERDAYS
Dec. 2, 1804—A 35-year-old Italian was crowned emperor of the French by an Italian. By defeating Italians he had risen in eight years from a bankrupt, unpopular lieutenant to be the most important man on earth, thus providing the world with its favorite Alger story.

Dec. 2, 1823—A 64-year-old Virginia aristocrat served notice on the autocrats who had undone the aforementioned Napoleon, that "we would consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

This was the Monroe Doctrine, enunciated in 1823 by European sovereigns to perpetuate existing dynasties by their joint opposition to all attempts at change, east disapproving glance at the rise of democracy in South America. Every dynasty represented in the Holy Alliance felt the Monroe Doctrine, which was simply a phrase in a Presidential message to Congress, became international law without action by any legislative body.

Dec. 2, 1856—The first patent for a railway sleeping car idea was issued to Theodore Woodruff. Not he but Western Wagner first utilized the idea successfully.

Wagner, the inventor of the sleeping-car, was killed in one of them! Consequently, it is George Pullman whose name is chiefly identified with them.

50 Years Ago Today—The modern Italians began their conquest of Africa. They took over the government in Massowah, their first colony in Africa, which grew in time to be Eritrea. In these 50 years they have acquired 585,435 square miles of African territory, not counting Ethiopia.

Dec. 2, 1922—Hsuan Tung (Pui Yi), deposed emperor of China, married a correspondence club picture-bride. She now is his empress of Manchuria.

WRITING WRONGS
You're misinformed if you think that the United States itself established the Monroe Doctrine. It didn't. Great Britain did. Originally, the statement of President Monroe was first proposed by the British minister of foreign affairs as a joint declaration of England and the U. S. Because it was, and because the British navy stood back of the principle and enforced it during 50 years when the U. S. itself virtually had no navy, the Doctrine prevailed.

What Do You Know About North Carolina?

By FRED H. MAY

- 1. When did the North Carolina general assembly elect Andrew Jackson to a position in this State?
2. What reason did Governor Everard give the Bishop of London for not having built a church?
3. What native of Guilford County became governor of the State of Tennessee?
4. How long did it take Richard Caswell, first delegate to Continental Congress, to travel to Philadelphia?
5. How was North Carolina discriminated against in the appointment of officers in the Confederate States Army?
6. What respect for the State flag was required of State institutions in 1907?

ANSWERS

- 1. In 1789 he was elected attorney general for the Miro District, which comprised of three counties, Sumner, Davidson and Tennessee, in what is now the State of Tennessee.
2. On April 14, 1729 Governor Everard wrote the Bishop of London that the money was in hand for building a church, but they were "hindered by our secretary, one John Lovrick, a man of no religion, fears not God nor man believes, neither, seldom seen at any place of Divine worship. His money is his God, ridicules all goodness."
3. Newton Cannon, born in Guilford county in 1781 was governor of Tennessee from 1835 to 1839. His chosen state first sent him to Congress in 1813 to 1817 and again from 1819 to 1823. He was appointed by President Monroe as one of the two commissioners to treat with the Chickasaw Indians.
4. Richard Caswell set out from Red House, N. C. on September 3, 1774. He rode 16 miles the first day, 40 miles the second, 45 the third, 40 the fourth, 48 the fifth, 45 the sixth, 40 the seventh, 16 the eighth, 41 the ninth, 10 the tenth, 19 the eleventh, 10 the twelfth, and 40 the thirteenth, reaching Philadelphia on September 15.
5. North Carolina furnished over 127,000 of the total of over 600,000 men in the army. In the appointment of 808 general officers, North Carolina was given only 35, when the State was entitled to 122. Out of eight full generals, none were from North Carolina; 21 lieutenant-generals, two from N. C.; 99 major-generals, seven from N. C.; 480 brigadier-generals, 26 from N. C.
6. The legislature of that year adopted an act requiring the officers of the State institutions to secure a State flag and display it "at all times, except during inclement weather, and upon the death of any State officer or any prominent citizen the flag shall be put at half mast until the burial of such person shall have taken place."

who has been seen about wearing dark glasses, isn't going in for that Hollywood gag of excessive cynicism and flight from recognition in the street. As a matter of fact he has had a minor eye ailment, which several trips to Johns Hopkins in Baltimore have cleared up. Tempest in a Teapot: Frances Maddux, the "smart" song-singer... My butcher has a Christmas gift suggestion: three pork chops in a platinum-lined box... The stage hands at "At Home Abroad" play ceaseless practical jokes on Bea Lillie, the star... For instance, in the bar scene, in which Bea picks up a towel from the counter a small mechanical snake leaped at her from underneath the rag the other night... She giggled and pushed the thing behind the bar so the audience would not catch on... Indeed I find Miss Lillie and her antics an acquired taste... Once she left me completely cold with her monkey shines but I am ready to bow from the waist and tell her she's pretty swell after all... At least the phony temperament which mars many an actress is missing in her case.

Scientific Study Of Coast Erosion Now Under Way

By J. C. BASKERVILLE.

Raleigh, Dec. 2.—Nature, in her various moods, is causing decided physical changes along the coast line of North Carolina, cutting new inlets here, closing old channels there, eating into the beaches at places and building up elsewhere.

In order to determine and evaluate these natural forces, a scientific study is being made along the coast under the direction of water resources and engineering of the Department of Conservation and Development under the direction of T. S. Johnson, chief engineer.

A party of engineers under the direction of Mr. Johnson spent the summer months on the coast in a check of changes made by the elements, and the office force is now engaged in studying the variations which have occurred since the last field party visited the same localities. A preliminary report on the subject is expected soon.

One of the strangest natural freaks as observed by the engineers is the migration of some of the inlets, which in cases has amounted to a movement of around a mile over a period of years. The check will enable an exact measurement of this phenomenon. Another odd occurrence resulting from Nature's caprices is the recent addition of some three acres to the State Park recently established at Cape Hatteras overnight.

The number of inlets from the sounds to the ocean has varied widely over a period of years. Mr. Johnson reports that at times there have been added as many as ten seemingly permanent inlets between Cape Henry in Virginia to Cape Lookout in Carteret county. At present, there are only five of these passages to the sea, Oregon, New, Hatteras, Ocracoke, and Drum inlets.

Constantly shifting sands; migrations, opening and closing of inlets; and erosion and accretion of coastline affect vitally the resources of the North Carolina coast, including shellfish, recreational values, migratory waterfowl, navigation, and other factors, according to Mr. Johnson. The studies now underway, it is pointed out, will furnish valuable information in behalf of the preservation and development of these resources.
