

Bing Miller Calls High Grid Candidates For Thursday

Candidates Will Report To New "Gym" At 2 P.M.

Prospects Look Some Brighter At Second Glance As Most of Boys Have Added Needed Weight; Miller Urges All Boys Interested to Report on Time

Latham L. "Bing" Miller, new athletic director at Henderson high school, today sounded a clarion call for all boys who will attend that school this year to report to him at the high school gymnasium Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock if they are interested in football.

The new mentor comes here with an excellent coaching record made since his graduation from Wake Forest College in 1932, and he hopes to add to his laurels at Henderson's new athletic plant.

This will be the first time in the history of Henderson schools that the high school teams will have the use of a gymnasium.

Miller was physical director at Rocky Mount Y. M. C. A., resigning that post to come to Henderson. The new director is an outstanding baseball player, having played in the eastern section much of the time. He was given a trial with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and his ability as a player landed him a job as coach at Louisville College last year.

Football prospects at the local institution looked rather gloomy at the first glance, but a ray of sunshine is peeping through the haze as the potential gridlers let it be known that they are ready for a tough season. Many of the boys have added weight since last season, and a year's experience will stand them in good stead during the coming campaign. Drills will begin just one week before the opening of school, and Miller expects to push his boys just as fast as possible in order to have them ready shortly after the opening of school.

No schedule has been announced as yet, but representative teams will be met during the year of the school's new athletic field, and athletic stock at the high school is on the rebound with the boys showing plenty of interest and pep, all set to get down to the work that's ahead.

ANDERSON WORKING ON PASS DEFENSE

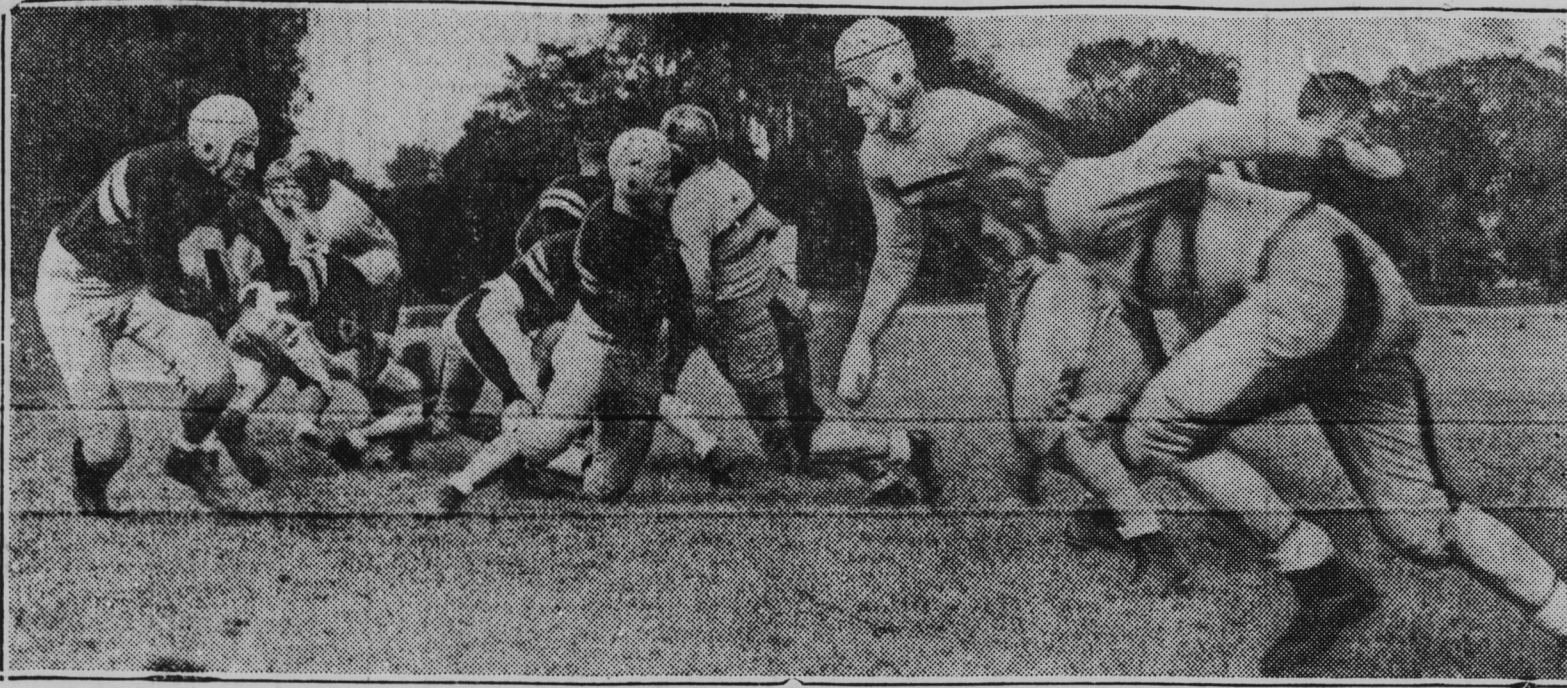

Drills at State Yesterday Against Elon Air Plays With Another on Tap

College Station, Raleigh, Sept. 8.—A session on pass defense Monday afternoon and another scheduled for today indicates that Hunk Anderson, head coach at North Carolina State College, has a great deal of respect for Elon's aerial game.

"Elon had one of the best passing attacks I saw last year and Coach Walker will have another such attack, equally as good, waiting for us next week," Coach Anderson says.

The Christians appear on State's schedule as the opening foe, meeting the Wolfpack in Riddick Stadium at State on Saturday afternoon, September 19. Louie Mark and Odell Smothers, both veterans, are being groomed to take over Sabol's duties, who graduated last spring. Anderson hopes that both will be able to knock down passes as did Sabol.

YOUNG WHITE BOYS WORST CRIMINALS

Those Between 16 and 25 Sense Less Responsibility, Gill Says

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In The Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILLE, Raleigh, Sept. 8.—The most dangerous criminals in North Carolina today, likewise the most incorrigible prisoners in the State prison system, are boys and young men between the ages of 16 and 25, Edwin Gill, commissioner of paroles, said today. More of these are white boys than Negroes, although the younger Negroes give more trouble than the older ones, Gill also said.

"One of the principal reasons for this situation is that boys and young men between these ages are more lacking in judgment and a sense of responsibility than at any other age, also more reckless and less fearful of consequences," Commissioner Gill said. "Another factor is that most of them think it is smart and daring to flaunt the law and break it. Instead of regarding it as a disgrace to be convicted and sent to prison, many of these youngsters regard it as something to be proud of and imagine that they have become big, bad heroes both among their former 'gang' in their home communities and among the other prisoners. They also think they are very clever and smart.

"I have talked to thousands of these young prisoners, many of them convicted of serious crimes and when they first get to prison most of them are proud of their past records as 'bad men' and brag about the many other crimes they committed without being arrested or convicted. They are utterly lacking in either self-respect or a desire to reform. Most of them also think they are very smart and clever.

Remedy Applied.

"We have found that about the only way we can deflate the pride and egotism of these young criminals is to ridicule them and try to make them see how dumb they are and to intimate that they must have some form of insanity. I frequently send them over to the State Hospital for the Insane for several days, to be examined by the doctors over there. They usually come back to the prison greatly subdued and much less hard boiled for they want to think they are very smart and clever and want others to think so, too.

"Some of these young prisoners soon get a different slant on things and make sincere efforts to reform. But on the whole, these youngsters are the most difficult prisoners we have to handle because of their mental attitudes."

Mining Town Solves Drunk Problem By Providing for Newfoundland Dog To Escort Them Home in the Night

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In The Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Sept. 8.—At least one town in the country has solved the problem of how to get the drunks home at night without greatly increasing the police force and hence increasing taxes, according to W. H. Trentman, vice president of the Occidental Life Insurance Company here. This town is Cripple Creek, Colorado, where all the old mines are now being operated full blast again for the first time in 50 years or more, and which is again the old rip-roaring, whoopee, wide-open mining town of the old west. Trentman spent several days in Cripple Creek this summer.

"The most interesting thing I saw in Cripple Creek, was 'Old Red,' a huge Newfoundland dog, which is maintained by a group of merchants there for the sole purpose of helping to get the drunks home at night," Trentman said. "Old Red" wears a harness with a strong handle on top. He is known to everyone in Cripple Creek and he knows all the drunks and where they live—and all the drunks know him. His job is to find the drunks and lead them to their homes. When he finds a drunk, he stops until the drunk of handle on his drunk takes hold of the handle on his harness and then he slowly guides the drunk along until he reaches the shack where he lives. I know it sounds incredible, but this big dog has been doing this for years.

"His tax is paid, likewise the cost of his food and other care by a group of merchants in Cripple Creek who regard 'Old Red' as being more valuable than police—if there are any police there—since he never argues with or beats up any of the drunks, merely guides 'em home." The population of Cripple Creek has increased 300 per cent in the past two years.
