ARMISTICE. (1918-1934)

By Grace Noll Crowell
A bleak November day, and a gray earth heavy
With grief grown old by the passing of the years,
And then a word, and wild hilarious
laughter,
And smiling joy, and prayers, and many tears.

"The Armistice, the Armistice!" a shouting
That all day long and night long not cease.

A bleeding world had found itself
unshackled,
At last, at last, the blessedness of peace!

What have we done? How have we failed each other?

The peace we welcomed has been lost, somehow,
And nations have not found it in their seeking;
There is no rest in all the world today.

God give us rest, God give us strength
and wisdom;
Forgive the frailties, the mistakes
of men;
God clear away the threatening
clouds, the thunder,
And let us find our lost peace once again.
