

High School Departments Put On Show Of Activity

Elaborate Program Tuesday Night Draws Large Crowd; Part of School's Observance of American Education Week, Nationwide Event

All departments and activities of Henderson high school participated in the program on "School Demonstration Night" given Tuesday evening in the auditorium of the school, and attended by an audience that filled most of the lower floor of the hall.

Faculty members of the various departments had arranged the numbers given by their students, giving an idea of the work being done in each section. The audience more or less marvelled at the accuracy and faithfulness of the program by comparison with the actual work of the classes.

After brief remarks by Prof. W. D. Payne, the principal, in introducing the program, a musical program was given by the glee club and several individual music pupils. Miss Dorothy Jones directed the glee club, and Miss Bessie Mae Johnson accompanied the group in their number.

Work of the library consisted of a skit in which the facilities were presented in their inadequacy before the new school was built and the change made possible by provision of the added quarters. A demonstration by the English department had to do with pronunciation, spelling, reading of good literature and the like, with about a dozen boys and girls taking part.

"History Family of the Henderson High School" was the theme of a number depicting social studies, and "Why Study Them Anyway?" was the way the foreign language department presented their part of the program.

Value of mathematics in practical everyday life was shown in a number by the "Math" department, and most of the audience gained a pretty good idea of the value of science in practical living from the program of the science department.

A demonstration by the new commercial department of the high school included the giving of dictation, typing and then the reading of the typed manuscript.

Coach L. L. Miller presented a group of students costumed as representatives of many different kinds of sports at the high school, including physical education work. "A Sound Mind in a Sound Body" was the theme.

The home hygiene class, under direction of Mrs. Leon Vick, gave a demonstration of caring for sick patients in the home that elicited the approval and applause of the audience. Parents of school pupils and the general public were invited to the program, which drew perhaps the most representative audience of school patrons that has yet assembled in the new high school. Nothing of the kind has been attempted here before, and the work was something of a revelation to most of those attending.

Before and after the program, visitors had an opportunity to move about through the handsome new building and see the equipment that has been provided for the students of the school. Class rooms were visited together with the library, the home economics rooms, and other departments.

Parents demonstrated their approval of the program by their attendance in large numbers and also by way of their applause for the various numbers offered.

FILE APPLICATIONS FOR SOIL PROGRAM

Will Be Asked Shortly; About 75 Percent of Growers Share

Records for the soil conservation program in Vance county have been perfected to the point where applications will shortly be called for from participants in the program in making claims for payments by the Federal government, it was stated today at the office of County Agent J. W. Sanders, director of the work.

It is estimated that approximately 75 percent of the farmers of the county took worksheets and had them measured and examined for compliance in the program, and that the total sum the aggregate number of growers in the county will probably receive will be around $100,000, or possibly more.

It is not now anticipated that any checks will be received much before the first of the year. There may be a variation in payments of ten percent, either up or down.

The office organization is putting the finishing touches on contracts or agreements, after township and county committees have checked them for the degree of compliance.

Payments under the soil conservation program will not be as heavy as those under the AAA, but growers will receive compensation for acreage taken out of cultivation in money crops and put to soil building crops and prevention of erosion.

COMPILING RECORDS FOR REVALUING JOB

Data on Property Adjacent to Each Tract Is Being Assembled

Compiling of records in the way of preliminary work for the quadrennial revaluation of property next year is under way at the court house under direction of the board of county commissioners.

A number of workers are active in the task, which may require several weeks.

What is being done is to take a certain lot or tract of land, and then ascertain the valuation of all land that bounds it on all sides, so as to obtain the relative and proportionate valuation.

Those engaged in the present task are having nothing to do with the actual revaluation of property. They are merely assembling data for the use of committees who will be named by the commissioners early in the new year to have in hand the actual responsibility of placing values on real estate.

County commissioners are not happy over the huge loss of taxables that will result from the adoption of the constitutional amendment in last week's election which exempts the first $1,000 of valuation on all property where it is owned by the occupant. They are worrying over the prospect of an increased tax rate as the result of this radical departure from custom and see only one probable alternative and that is to get the revenue by raising tax rates, unless some new source of income should be discovered.
