THREE WRENS.

It was when I was blackberring:
The first I knew of them
Was a sharp strong "churr-rring"
A sound
Immense, for so small a bird
It seemed impossible.
Yet there he was:
Little Cork Wren.
Chattering and clattering his rapier
back
And bobbing up and down,
His tail most janty, held aloft,
His eye-stripe lending him a smartness
Indescribable. And then!
A second note sounded and behold!
A second wren, and then a third.
All hopping and bobbing on the bran-
ble bush
Not two yards off.
I stood and watched them, loving them.
And grateful for the miracle of birds;
And grateful for three little wrens,
So unafraid and cheerful,
Hopping and bobbing on the bran-
ble bush.

Molley Kerr.
