

PLENTY WORK FOR BULLDOG CAGERS

Miller Anxious to Get Look At Boys Wednesday Night After Holidays

Work and plenty of it is the menu for Henderson high school cagers as laid out by Coach Bing Miller when his charges returned to their drills Wednesday night.

Christmas holiday season has kept the boys off the court for several days, and Miller is anxious to determine the effects of turkey, candy and other choice morsels of Christmas cheer have had upon his charges. He had drilled them only a short time before the suspension of school for the holidays.

Miller has announced that his first game will probably be with Lawrenceville, Va. five.

TERRORS BACK ON CAMPUS FOR WORK

N. C. State Basketeers Report for Drills After Christmas Holidays

College Station, Raleigh, Dec. 29—Members of North Carolina State's varsity basketball squad returned to the campus yesterday from their Christmas holidays to resume drills for the heavy schedule arranged for them this winter. The players have been away from the campus since December 17.

Dr. R. R. Sermon, coach, met the players upon their arrival and after looking them over said it would take several days to get them back in shape for play. "From the way they look they have been eating turkey and candy every day since they left here," Sermon said.

Coach Sermon will send the players through two pre-drills daily until January 4 when school work begins. State will have South Carolina as its first 1937 foe. The Gamecocks, once powerful figures in Southern Conference basketball, will oppose State here on Friday night, January 8. It will be the second Conference test this winter for State. It met and defeated William and Mary, 49-21, on December 16.

Duke Cagers Will Return Wednesday For Court Drills

Durham, Dec. 29—Cutting the Christmas vacation short, Duke's Blue Devils of basketball returned to the hardwood Wednesday to get ready for a series of games next week which will pit them against some of their outstanding opponents of the season. After a couple of practice games this week, they will open official home competition on Monday night against a strong Wake Forest team that features Jim Waller, sensational forward. On Wednesday night they meet Davidson at Winston-Salem, return here Thursday night to face South Carolina and then enroute for Annapolis, Md., where on Saturday afternoon they battle the Navy Midshipmen.

The Blue Devils of Eddie Cameron swept through four pre-Christmas engagements with Richmond, Randolph-Macon, Clemson and South Carolina but they were hard-pressed in all of them. Late rallies pulled the Richmond, Clemson and South Carolina games out of the fire.

Coach Cameron worked various combinations in the early games. His forward and guard posts appear to be very well set but center play has been causing the Duke mentor much concern.

The game Monday night with the Deacons will mark the varsity debut of Sophomore Bob O'Mara who is expected to be as outstanding a cager as he was a grinder during the past season. It will also be the season's debut for Fred (Mouse) Edwards, a colorful member of last year's aggregation. Both were late in reporting for basketball due to a vacation after football and did not take part in the first four games.

Next week will also mark the first appearance of the boxing and wrestling teams. The ring squad, outstanding contender for conference honors, meets South Carolina in Duke gym while the wrestling go to Norfolk to face the "X" team there.

Thrilling Play in Southern Grid Classic

Fletcher Sims, Georgia Tech's star quarterback, is shown dropping the ball as he was tackled by Evans after a 25-yard gain in the annual football classic between Georgia Tech and the University of California at Atlanta. Herwig (left) of the Bears, rushed in and recovered the ball. The Georgia engineers won, 13 to 7. (Central Press)

Autonomy Is Desired For U. N. C. Units

autonomous, as that Administrative Dean J. W. Harrelson at State College and Administrative Dean W. C. Jackson of Women's College and their respective faculties, will have as much authority as the presidents of these institutions formerly had before they were consolidated with the University of North Carolina and became units in the Greater University. The alumni of these two units are perfectly willing for President Graham to have complete authority over the Chapel Hill unit of the University, but think he should have advisory power only over the other two units, instead of both dictatorial and veto powers.

While it is admitted that the firing of football Coach Hearnly W. (Hunk) Anderson by President Graham last week was the match which set off the power among the alumni, causing the explosion which resulted in the meeting at which it was decided to seek "home rule" for State College in all academic matters as well as in athletics, it is maintained that the Anderson incident is merely one of many similar incidents in which Dean Harrelson and the faculty have been overruled by President Graham. In Anderson's case, the new contract, which had been offered him by the athletic council and which had been approved by Colonel Harrelson, was set aside by President Graham, although the faculty council is understood to have stood seven to four with the athletic council in favor of Anderson's retention for another year.

Graham Losing Strength

Just how far the State alumni can get with the board of trustees in their effort to seek "home rule" for State and the other units of the university and to curtail President Graham's authority over more than the Chapel Hill unit, remains to be seen. It is no secret, however, that a good many members of the board of trustees are not as willing to back up Graham as they were a year ago, due to the new famed and much discussed "Graham Plan," the Professor Erickson incident and other happenings. As a result, if the State alumni can now get the support of the Women's College alumni and a reasonable amount of support from the Chapel Hill alumni back of their plan for greater autonomy and more "home rule" for the various units, a good many observers believe that they have a good chance to be successful in clipping President Graham's wings and thus in greatly curtailing his authority.

Some of the more rabid anti-Graham alumni, of course, wanted to join the rabid anti-Graham alumni of the Chapel Hill unit and try to get the board of trustees to oust Graham entirely. But the more level-headed alumni decided it would be better strategy at this time merely to try to curb Graham's extensive powers over the various units, instead of trying to oust him entirely as president of the greater university, with the result that this later plan was finally approved.
