TODAY'S YESTERDAYS

Feb. 9, 1815—A newspaper advertisement in London caused the public to become acquainted with the tragedy of a young woman, normally and attractively formed, save in one respect. She was pigheaded. Literally! She had the snout, the eyes, the mouth of a swine. The ad was a "personal," an offer from a gentleman who had heard of the monstrous person to live with the afflicted creature and brighten her life—for a consideration.

The monster was herself a gentleman with means that prevented her from ever having to want for anything, except paid companionship.

Feb. 9, 1933—The Weather Bureau found where the coldest spot in the U. S. was—in Yellowstone Park. Thermometers there registered 66 degrees below zero at Riverside observatory, which is barely within Montana boundaries.

THE WORLD WAR DAY-BY-DAY

20 Years Ago Today—Secretary of State Lansing told American shipowners they could send their vessels wherever they liked and "needed steps may be taken to prevent or resist attack."

Spain, Brazil, Cuba, Peru, Chile and Uruguay sent notes to Germany protesting against its unrestricted submarine warfare and approving the stand taken by the U. S. That day the submarines sank 10 more vessels.

Great Britain and France addressed assurances to Washington that they would grant safe conduct to Ambassador Von Bernstorff, and Germans thereupon agreed to allow Ambassador Gerard to depart. He delayed leaving, however, to arrange for Americans to depart.

What Do You Know About North Carolina?

By FRED H. MAY

1. Before the office of lieutenant governor was established who succeeded the governor in event of a vacancy?
2. When was the first bank established in Salisbury?
3. Who was the Pitt county man that became one of Tennessee's early governors?
4. When did Rowan county have a gold mining town with a population of over 3,000?
5. How much did prohibition law violations increase in 1934 over 1933?
6. What did Governor Morrison tell the New York Tribune in 1922 about suppressing the Ku Klux Klan?

ANSWERS

1. The Constitution of 1776 provided for the "speaker of the Senate" to be the next in line. This plan remained in effect until the Constitution of 1868 was adopted.
2. In 1808 when the Bank of the Cape Fear opened a branch. John Steele was agent, or cashier. The currency, notes and bonds were kept in an iron chest which was kept in the sleeping quarters of a Citizen of the town. Another safety measure was to chain the chest to the floor. The keys to the chain locks were kept in an agreed place, known to only two or three persons, so that the chest might be removed in event of fire.
3. Willie Blount, governor of Tennessee from 1809 to 1815. Governor Blount died at Clarksville, Tenn. in 1835 at the age of 68 years.
4. In 1856 Gold Hill, Rowan county, was a thriving mining town. Reports show that 3,000 laborers alone were employed in operation there. The place was established in 1842. Besides the mercantile and trade industries the place supported four doctors, and was the best market for produce in Piedmont and Western Carolina. In 1930 Gold Hill had a population of 166.
5. The total number of cases tried in North Carolina in superior courts and minor courts for the year ending July 1, 1933 were 9,976; for the year ending July 1, 1934, 13,366 cases were tried. These figures do not include cases tried in federal courts.
6. The Tribune wired Governor Morrison to know if he would cooperate with the New York governor in suppressing the organization. The North Carolina governor's reply was that he had no intention of joining governors of other states in such a campaign. No trouble was expected in North Carolina, and if any did arise the State would be able to take care of it.

In Budapest, which has more duels than any other city in the world, policemen carry swords instead of pistols.

George H. Barnes, Philadelphia historian, sheds new light on the origin of the major party symbols in referring to a recent statement.

"It is difficult to perceive how the Nast cartoon of Jan. 15, 1870, could have been construed as intending that the jackass was to depict the Democratic party. The inscription on its body was 'Copperhead Press.' There was a number of Democratic papers that had upheld Lincoln, but, there were other papers of that party, and some independent papers, that had demanded that the war should be terminated, though it would result in disaster. The cartoon bore the title 'A Jackass kicking a dead lion,' the latter bearing the name Edward M. Stanton, Secretary of War, who had recently died.

"The cartoon of Nov. 7, 1874 depicts a jackass wearing a lion's skin bearing the word 'Caesarism,' a collar worn by the jackass is inscribed 'N. Y. Herald' and the animal is shown to be braying against the proposed nomination of Grant for a third term. In the background is an enormous elephant inscribed 'Republican Vote' that elected Grant in 1872 and was intended by Nast to indicate the futility of opposing Grant's efforts to secure the nomination. In that cartoon appeared, apparently, Nast's first reference to the Democratic party and it was portrayed as a fox with a collar inscribed 'Dec. part,' the face of the fox resembled Samuel J. Tilden."

Queries, reproofs, etc., are welcomed by George H. Barnes.

State Home Agent

RUTH CURRENT

College Station, Raleigh, Feb. 9—Miss Ruth Current has been named State Home Demonstration agent at State College to succeed Dr. Jane S. McKimmon, whose resignation was announced a few days ago.

The appointment was made by Dean I. O. Schaub, director of the State College extension service, who said she brings to her new position a wealth of experience and ability that well qualifies her to take charge of the home demonstration work.

Miss Current is a native of the Mt. Vernon Community near Cleveland in Rowan County, and was reared on a farm.

She attended high school at China Grove, went to Meredith College for a year, and graduated from Harrisonburg Teachers College, Harrisonburg, Virginia. She also attended Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee.

In the spring of 1927 she became home agent in Iredell county, where she served until she was advanced to the position of southwestern district agent in 1930, with headquarters at State College.

During the last five years of her work as district agent she acted as extension specialist in girls' 4-H club work and directed the farm women's short course of the Farm and Home Weeks held at State College each summer.

BROWDER FOE, WIFE INDICTED

Mayor and Mrs. Samuel E. Beecher

Indictments for malfeasance and maladministration have been returned against Mayor Samuel E. Beecher of Terre Haute, Ind., and his wife, who is city controller. Beecher is the man who became nationally known last autumn when he caused the arrest of Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president in 1936, when Browder tried to address a rally in Terre Haute. Mayor Beecher and his wife are charged with paying city employees while the employees were engaged in political work for the mayor. They also are accused of using city gasoline for private use. Friends termed the indictments the "result of political spitteword."

Has High Record

MARVIN FOYLES

College Station, Raleigh, Feb. 9—The best all-around 4-H club record in North Carolina—that's the achievement that won for Marvin Foyles, of Lenoir County, a four-year scholarship at State College.

The scholarship was awarded by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda educational bureau to the North Carolina 4-H club member making the best record over a period of three years or more, said L. R. Harrill, 4-H club leader of State College.

Foyles was selected on a basis of his production record in club projects his leadership activities in his club and other organizations, and his record as a high school student, Harrill added.

At the age of 12, Foyles joined a 4-H club in Lenoir County and has continued in club work for the past eight years. He has completed six corn projects, three tobacco projects, and one forestry project.

His average corn yield per acre has been 44.5 bushels raised at an average cost of 32.5 cents a bushel. This yield was more than twice the average yield for the county and the State. He has made $569.03 from his tobacco projects $322.41 of the amount being made last year.

As an act. 3 club member and a leader, Foyles has been selected to represent his club at county camps and State 4-H short courses at State College. For three years he was a member of the Lenoir County seed judging team that won third, second and then first place respectively in the annual seed-judging contests at State Fair.

He has served as a club leader, vice president, and president of the Wheat Swamp 4-H club. He has also held official positions with the Grange in his community and has represented it at two State Grange conventions.

In 1935 he was awarded a one-year college scholarship in the State 4-H corn-growing contest, and he won the State leader's medal for the best individual record submitted at the State 4-H short course in 1936. He was one of four North Carolina club members selected to attend the National 4-H summer camp in Washington last June.

OTHERS VIEWS

REMEDIES FOR FLOODS.

To the Editor:

No one seems to know what to do about the floods devastating the land for miles around the big rivers. Of course there are ways to prevent all this. I think I will go to Washington and tell Congress some of my plans for preventing such wholesale destruction of crops and property. I give you an outline of my ideas.

Here is Plan No. 1. Next year before the rainy season, install millions of sun glasses over all the rivers so the sun will cause the water to boil and then evaporate. It will go up and come down perhaps in some places where water is needed, New York for instance. They need more water there, and more soap also.

No, here is plan No. 2. When all the rivers begin to rise, drive all the cows to the streams to drink up the water and have the railroads bring millions of tons of salt from the sea to feed the cows. If they can't keep pace with the rivers' rise, give them more salt. This plan will help the railroad just as the first plan will help the glass-makers. Now, if Congress, while they are appropriating, will not set aside 50 cents for this arrangement, I suggest Plan No. 3, as follows:

Send billions, not millions, of men, but billions to all the rivers to sink the river beds down I will say fifty feet lower, that would employ everybody that is out of work, and instead of people fishing with a 10-foot line, they would have to have one a 100 feet long and that would help those who sell fishing tackle, and if Congress doesn't think this feasible, let the river beds stay at their present level and raise the balance of the country. Now, if some of these things don't work, I don't know what will.

WILLIAM R. CARROLL

Cities Demanding Liquor Money, Too

counties. Only by some sort of agreement with the counties can cities get a penny, and it is too obvious for argument that the counties hold the whip hand in any discussion of this phase.

Wherefore controllers who honestly laugh at the frantic antics of Cale K. Burgess and his dries are not sleeping any too well when they picture the possibility of the cities (as personified by Pat Healey of the Municipal League) kicking over the traces.

State Liquor Board

Power Very Limited

the location of any store at any particular place.

It can remove officers employed or elected by the counties, but cannot appoint officers and can remove them only "in case of violation of the terms of spirit of the Act."

About the only original jurisdiction given the State board is its power to require the use of a uniform accounting system in the operation of all county stores set up under the act.

Too, it can grant, or refuse to grant, permits to do business in selling liquor to the county stores and it can issue permits for the establishment of warehouses for the storage of alcoholic beverages in the State.

All in all, it seems that the county controllers conceded to the state controllers only such powers as would also necessarily be implicit in any state board. The county men feared the creation of a gigantic state machine built up on the power to purchase liquor. Past history has shown that the power to purchase is the lever by which political power is exerted and the buildup of a vast political machine almost invariably follows on the heels of a grant of too great a power to purchase.

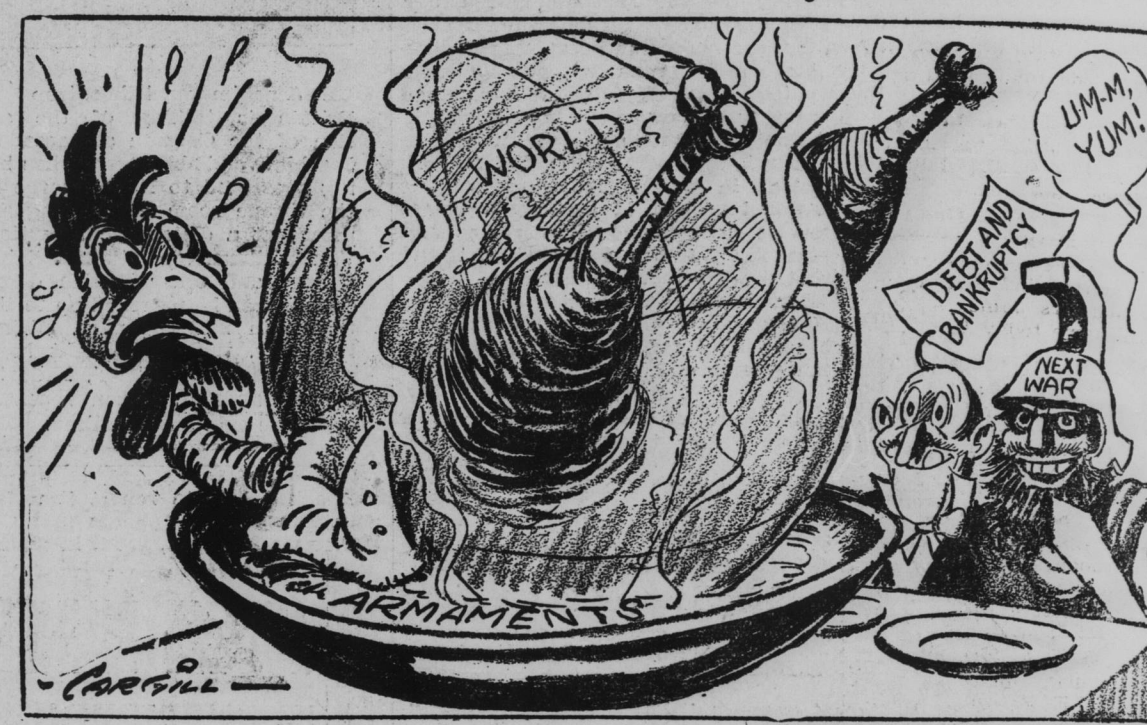

The system now operating in seven counties will be little affected by the Act, because the setups now existing will be automatically validated and extended until 1939. One of the chief fears of county men was that existing liquor stores would be closed up pending another election or pending appointment of a new set of officials.

As to the method of electing county boards, too, the county controllers are quite well pleased. In liquor store counties the boards have been named by the county commissioners, but there was just about no opposition at all to the plan to have them named at joint sessions of county commissioners, boards of health and board of education. This provision, canny politicians point out, insures against Republican control of liquor stores even in Republican counties.
