Old Age And Child Aid Bill To Pass In House

Opposition in Senate Was Over County Aid, But That Was Necessary To Avoid Packing Relief Rolls; Faces House After Revenue Bill Is Passed

Raleigh, Feb. 11.—The old age pension bill, which also provides for State participation in aid to dependent children, has successfully gotten by the Senate and will be taken up by the House as soon as that body completes its work on the revenue bill. Indications are that the old age pensions and children's aid bill will have somewhat harder sledding in the House, due to the greater opposition there to county participation in the payment of pensions. But the belief in most circles is that the bill will eventually pass the House in virtually the same form it passed the Senate.

Appeal From Drys Won't Avail Much

The Mississippi began a slow recession here after standing for two days at a record peak, and the danger zone shifted southward where the pick and shovel brigade confidently manned the levee lines.
