WHAT OF THE QUIET SINGERS?

What of the quiet singers
Who shook no topless towers,
Dreamers and beauty-bringers,
Whose words became as ours?

They who had learned to wonder
And still saw Shelley plain
Harled from their hands no thunder,
Harbored no high disdain.

The blackbird's fluty whistle
Where steaming furrows ran,
Bardock and roadside thistle,
A season's golden span—

Such were the simple sources
From which their music rose:
A river's winding courses,
The twilight's muted close.

Rebels and challenge-flingers,
Prophets of steel and stone,
What of the quiet singers,
Whose words are still our own!

Leslie Nelson Jennings.
