

OFFICERS NAMED BY FEED MAKERS

Association to Meet To Discuss Rules for Sale of Feed in State

(News and Observer)
Preparatory to a meeting here yesterday to discuss changes in regulations governing the sale of feed in the State, the North Carolina Feed Manufacturers' Association yesterday met here and elected J. Wesley Jones of Statesville president.

Gordon Maxwell of Goldsboro was named vice-president, and M. H. Stewart of Greensboro, secretary-treasurer. Representative Enoch W. Wilson, of Sampson County was placed on the executive committee to represent the eastern district, and John C. Watson of Greensboro was named to represent the central district. The president was authorized to appoint a representative of the western district because only a few delegates from that section attended.

Addressing the banquet of feed manufacturers, Commissioner of Agriculture W. Kerr Scott stressed the importance to dairymen of rigidly tested feeds. "The rigid milk inspection laws, competitive feeds of poor quality and lax methods of testing milk have caused more dairymen to go out of business than any three other things that might be mentioned," he said.

"North Carolina dairymen have not been given a chance to succeed," he continued. "Milk is now coming into North Carolina and being used for food, and at the same time North Carolina dairies are being told to 'close up' by the indirect method of requiring additional equipment."

Well-known dairymen of the State will appear at the feed hearing today, along with State College extension specialists and Department of Agriculture authorities. Assistant Agriculture Commissioner D. S. Coltrane will preside.

Coltrane said the meeting will be "one of many called by the department in an effort to promote even greater inspectional and regulatory programs for the betterment of farmer and manufacturer alike."

"A discussion of resolutions adopted by the Board of Agriculture in connection with the manufacturing of feed will also be a feature of the meeting," he added.

France, With Distrust of Her Leaders, Is Decaying

France technically "won the war," she lost it in an economic sense. Germany's refusal to pay reparations was the final blow. The continual efforts of her labor unions to shorten working hours and increase wages has resulted in decreasing production and undermining the franc.

France's flirtation with Italy during the latter's campaign in Ethiopia caused her to lose the confidence of England. Her only real allies are Russia, whom she despises, and the small Eastern and Balkan States, States, whom she holds only with bribes. France greatly needs a policy—and the courage to hold to it. It sometimes seems to me that only a dictator can save that unhappy country.

May Join Fascists.
Both Germany and Italy, her nearest neighbors, do have a policy. They both know where they are going and are on the way. The best informed in France tell me that Spain will also be under a dictator before long. The rebels are sure to win. Germany and France are now in a death struggle—with Germany getting stronger every day.

If Hitler and Mussolini continue in power a few more years, it looks as if France might naturally become a Fascist power. Certainly the defeatist attitude is seen everywhere. Those with money are sending it to England; those without money are refusing to raise children. All hate to pay taxes, feeling that it is like pouring money down a rat-hole.

Conservative or Radical?

Frenchmen say: "Why spend money on taxes; why make sacrifices to create armaments? England will take care us England cannot afford to let any unfriendly nation get control of us." That might prove to be true; but it is a dangerous thing for France to count upon. I remember when Owen Young and General Dawes were in Paris, at a Reparations Conference "to save civilization." One evening a high French official took them out for the night to see the sights. Upon their return next morning they commented, "We wonder whether civilization is worth saving?" England may some day feel the same about France.

Furthermore, future inventions may soon make France of little value to England. In other words, England's security may become entirely independent of France. At any rate, England has officially notified France, Belgium, and her other neighbors that she now has no alliances and is under no obligation to any nation that does not fly the British flag.

Paris Not France.

France has the reputation of being very socialistic and almost communistic. I think, however, that the people who believe this judge her by Paris, Lyons and the other large cities which they visit. Paris is not France. Most every Frenchman already has a small patch of ground. All he wants is to be let alone. Ordinarily, the French take little interest in politics. They have little confidence in their politicians and avoid in every possible way their citizenship duties.

Hence, when the wage workers of the cities are on the rampage, we think that France is headed for revolution. When, however, an emergency comes, the French farmers go to the polls and clean out these agitators. Today, in view of the tremendous havoc which revolution has wrought in Spain, these Frenchmen are even more determined to stamp out communism. I say this even though France has a mutual defense alliance with Russia.

Fight To The Finish.
Without doubt France is slipping. She is frightened. She needs a great leader. But France is rich and can be very powerful, when once aroused. When the Germans began to retreat in 1919, France wanted to follow them to Berlin and "clean up the mess" once for all. President Wilson objected. Instead, he promised her a great sum of money, known as "Reparations." France has never been able to collect this money and has now seen Germany tear up the entire treaty.

France appreciates what we did to help her during the war; but she feels that the United States has taken sides with Germany ever since and has robbed her of her rightful victory. All this means as follows: France will do everything possible to prevent another conflict with Germany; but if it comes she will fight to the finish. The next World War will make the last look like a mere skirmish.

Yesterday I talked with two prominent Japanese—a high military officer and a banker. I asked: "Why are you warring against the Chinese?" They answered: "We are fighting China to make her people our friends. We want to be friendly with them; but they refuse. We try to shake hands with them, but they will not shake. Hence, we must make them like us." Can you beat that? Incidentally, Japan is very much disturbed by the talk of a general world boycott on her goods. The refusal by labor unions to handle Japanese exports and the refusal of women to buy Japanese products may be a factor in restoring peace and in teaching Japan a needed lesson.
