

N. C. STATE MEETS ROANORE QUINT

High Scoring Cage Stars of Two States to Match Scoring Ability.

College Station, Raleigh, Dec. 14.—High scoring basketball stars of two states will meet here tomorrow night in Frank Thompson Gymnasium when State College engages the crack Roanoke College. The game will start at 8 o'clock. The visitors are led by Paul Rice and Gene Studebaker, veteran forwards who dropped in 175 points each last winter in 21 games to tie for third place in individual scoring honors in Virginia. Bob Sheffield, six foot five inch center, is another high scorer on the Virginia team. Sheffield is a transfer student from Bluefield Junior College. State's high scorers—Captain Mac Berry, center, and Bill Mann and P. G. Hill, forwards—will oppose the high scoring Virginians in what may be the best scoring battle waged in Frank Thompson Gymnasium this winter. Berry has led the Southern Conference for the past two years. Last winter he scored 270 points and the year before 229. Mann was another high scorer last winter. He finished in the first ten.

EPSOM WINS TWO FROM AYCOCK HIGH

Girls Get 21-10 Verdict Boys Win, 38-12, at High School Gym

Epsom racked up two victories over Aycock high school basketball players here last night in Henderson high school gymnasium, the girls winning 21 to 10 and the boys 38 to 12. Miss Wilson led the victors with 12 points, while Miss Mitchell got six and Miss Smith 3. Miss Wright scored all of Aycock's points. Claude Dickerson paced the boys to victory with 14 points, Jones got 12, Ellington, 8, and Duke 4. W. Dickerson turned in a fine performance at guard. Puckett got five of Aycock's points. Adcock, 4, Greenway 2, and Hoyle 1.

STATE FROSH WILL PLAY NINE GAMES

College Station, Raleigh, Dec. 14.—State College's freshman basketball team will play at least nine games this season according to Robert (Bob) Warren, yearling coach. In releasing the schedule, Warren indicated that additional games would probably be added, most likely during the Christmas holidays. The Techlets have games carded with the four freshmen teams from the Big Five schools and also have games with Mars Hill Junior College and Georgia Military Academy. The schedule: January 14—Carolina, at Raleigh; 20—Wake Forest, at Raleigh; 25—Carolina, at Chapel Hill. February 1—Duke, at Raleigh; 3—Mars Hill, at Raleigh; 4—Georgia Military Academy, at Raleigh; 11—Wake Forest, at Wake Forest; 15—Davidson, at Raleigh; 18—Duke at Durham.

KILLED BY CONVICTS IN PRISON RIOT

Captain Olin Sanders, fatally wounded, is shown on a stretcher as he was taken out of the office of the South Carolina State Penitentiary at Columbia, S. C., where he was stabbed to death by six desperate convicts who attempted to force their way from the prison. Sanders died in a hospital a few minutes after this picture was taken. All the prisoners were forced out of their barricaded refuge when Gov. Olin Johnston ordered National Guardsmen to release tear-gas bombs.

HOW IT WORKED
The federal government justifiably took the situation in hand. Accordingly, Uncle Sam undertook to spend $1 in United States money to supplement each state's $1 in the construction of first class roads within said state's boundaries. That started the states' road building programs a-going. Each state wanted to get all it could of that federal money. It "hooked" itself to the limit to match Uncle Sam's money. It was all right up to a certain point, but there were states which overdid themselves. They bonded themselves for more than they could afford in order to avail themselves of federal benefits that they did not need. They have better roads than they require, involving higher taxation rates than they well can pay—just because, by greed, they grabbed at near-bankruptcy. AN ECONOMICAL PROBLEM Incidentally they raised Cain with the national transportation industry. The railways are "in the soup" largely because of the growth of bus and truck competition with rail passenger and freight carrying. Probably it served the rail lines right to have their selfish monopoly cracked in the back by this new rivalry. Still, it HAS created a new economic problem. It is a national problem, too. Yet, the states do not want to consider it so. "States' rights" is their motto. AN OLD QUOTATION The states' righters, in short, want all the privileges of local government, with all the advantages (if any) of nationalization. As Senator King remarks, they cannot have and eat their cake simultaneously. That is a chestnutty quotation, but it is applicable.

Bootleggers Buy Direct From Big Distilleries Now

In the Six Walter Hotel, in the Six Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Dec. 14.—North Carolina bootleggers now buy about ninety per cent of their illicit liquor direct from distillers in Ohio and Kentucky, in the opinion of Cutler Moore, chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control board.

This is a change in tactics which has occurred within the last few months. Up to then most of the liquor sold in so-called dry counties of North Carolina was either stilled locally or was shipped in by jobbers and wholesale houses in Maryland. The present technique calls for shipment by the truckload direct from distillery to bootleg joint—usually a filling station or "night spot" alongside a prominent highway. The liquor is way-billed to some point in South Carolina, making it a practical impossibility for enforcement officers to interfere with its transportation, their only hope being to catch the truck in the act of unloading or to locate large cases of the liquor after it has been unloaded and is awaiting sale. In dry counties the bootlegger must still face fierce competition from dealers in fortified wines, the accent being on fortification instead of wine. Even in ABC counties, however, the bootlegger doesn't always get his wares from the county stores. They have discovered that by buying large lots at the distilleries they can get their wares cheaper. So in these counties there is a three-way bid for the trade—the legal stores, the bootlegger and the "wine" seller being all interested in the chap who likes his drink.

States Greedy In Asking U. S. Funds

Business men's convention in a local hotel. States Inconsistent. The states are extremely inconsistent in this matter. Each is very jealous of its individual independence—some especially so, but none is unresentful of any hint of dictation, in its home affairs, by District of Columbia officials. Yet all of them constantly invite it by demands for cash from Uncle Sam's treasury. And if it isn't forthcoming, the most vociferous of states' rights solons are loudest in expressions of their indignation. When Uncle Sam Cuts!—Occasionally Uncle Sam feels an urge to curtail his donations to state funds for their various own reliefs, activities and improvements. Whenever he has one of these spasms of economy, the states "yell their heads off." Illustratively, not long ago President Roosevelt suggested to Congress the desirability of cutting down on appropriations for state road building. The states' protest against such a policy has been terrific. Of course, the automotive industry has joined in it. A NECESSITY Now, road building, in moderation, undoubtedly is a strong thing. I can remember when our rural highways were practically impossible to travel in bad weather. Their condition handicapped marketing; it was a national liability. With the auto's advent there simply HAD to be an improvement. And it had to be general. An autist was not much benefited if, after a few miles' journeying along a good pike through an up-to-date community, he bogged down on a mud road in some less public-spirited area just adjoining. Unquestionably some co-ordination of highways became cryingly neces-
