SIGNATURES.

What cautious animal goes there—
The bronzy deer, the furry hare,
The farmer's cat, the grinning fox
Racing with time to gain the rocks?

O, even city folk might know
If only, like the tracks in snow,
A tall or untler carved the air
To signify what passed, and where!
Velma Hitchcock.

HOSTAGE.

The hills here blackened walls of slate.
The wind builds castles marble-white
And on the trees the glittering weight
Of frosty spear heads catch the light.

The sky rears battlements of clouds
Water is fortress firm with ice;
The earth is hard, reluctant, proud
Caution of any warm device.

But here along a hidden lane,
Creeping and careful in the snow,
Spring sneaks her vanguard by again
And leaves three flowers in a row!
Sara King Carleton.

Literary Club Members Guests Of Sorosis Club

The Sorosis club was charmingly entertained by Mrs. T. H. Crowder Thursday afternoon, at her home on Chestnut street.

"Potential Benefits of Inter-Club Cooperation" was the topic for the afternoon. Mrs. Alex Watkins had charge of the program. She presented representatives from four of the Literary clubs of Henderson.

The Tuesday club was delightfully represented by Mrs. Sam Watkins. Their subject for the year has been "The Modern Woman". Mrs. Watkins gave an interesting discussion of "Know Yourself with Variations".

The Junior Tuesday club, whose subject has been "Scrap Books", was represented by Mrs. Thomas Badger. She gave a pleasing description of the "House of Seven Gables", under the program division of architecture.

Mrs. R. G. S. Davis, from the Alma Club, gave a unique and interesting paper on the "Changes and Changes in the Last 23 Years."

Mrs. Carlton Radford, of the Sans Souci club, presented their subject "Below the Potomac". Her topic, under the division of Protest and Progress, "Bigger and Better?" was treated in a very attractive way.

The Students club was to have been represented by Mrs. Sam T. Peace, but she was out of town.

Following the delightful papers by the club's honor guests, Harold Crowder, son of the hostess, as a token of St. Patrick, presented each of them a miniature corsage of green carnations and ferns.

Mrs. Crowder invited her guests into the dining room and served a delicious salad plate, followed by ice cream and cake in the shamrock motif. She was assisted in serving by Mrs. C. A. Crews, and her son Harold. Spring flowers were beautifully arranged in the house.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Alvin Fountain, at her home in Raleigh, on April 2.

Choir Rehearsal.

"Giant's Garden" Is Given at Zeb Vance
