Sells 1,401,028 Pounds of Leaf for $21.96 Average

The new auction selling season got under way on the Henderson tobacco market this week with the sale of 1,401,028 pounds of leaf for $307,702.07 at an average of $21,96 per hundred pounds, according to official statistics announced today by Fred M. Allen, Jr., supervisor of sales for the mar-ket

Nearly a million pounds was offer-ed on sale on Tuesday, the opening day, when the average price was day, when the average price was $22.90 per hundred for actual sales of 506,444 pounds, and with $116,432.56 paid to growers for their offerings that day. Wednesday saw the block of Tuesday cleared, with the sale of 408,200 pounds for $103,360.59 at an average of $20.42 per hundred. There appeared to be fairly general satisfaction with prices on opening day though many growers hoped for day, though many growers hoped for more money than their offerings ac-tually brought. The price, however, seemed to be about in line with the markets that have previously started their seasons and ware considered their seasons, and were considered fair, in view of the admittedly in-ferior quality of leaf in this year's crop.

Poorer grades predominated in the offerings for the entire week, and much damaged tobacco was on warehouse floors.

As the week ended, new quantities of leaf were already being brought in for the sale on Monday. It is expected that better quality of tobacco will make its appearance on floors next week, and that sales will see higher average prices paid.

It is customary for first primings to come onto the market first at the start of the season, and this year's opening was no exception to that custom. Improvement in prices is an ticipated from this time on. The year's crop is expected to be short on account of unfavorable weather and curtailment under the 1938 crop con trol program.
