What Do You Know About North Carolina?

By FRED H. MAY

- 1. When was a navy yard established at Charlotte?
2. What response did President Polk get from his call for volunteers for the Mexican War?
3. When did North Carolina make the first appropriation for University maintenance?

ANSWERS.

- 1. Early in the war the Confederate government bought the Mecklenburg Iron Works and foundry and established the property as a navy yard.
2. A call was issued in 1846 for ten companies and within a very few weeks 40 companies had answered.
3. The first direct appropriation for maintenance of the University was in 1881 when the legislature provided $5,000 for one year.

ANSWERS TO TEN QUESTIONS.

FEEDSTUFF MARKETS CONTINUE DECLINE.

Raleigh, Oct. 22.—Feedstuff markets continue to decline, influenced by a slow inquiry for the heavy offerings, weak grain markets, and abundant farm supplies of feed grains and forage...

Sam Blackwell is Mr. Bob's oldest son. His wife is W. H. Milton's daughter. Fred Blackwell, wife, and children were there. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parham and children. Jack is the singing man. He should have been named Sam, so he could be called "Singing Sam."

Grits and Gravel....

By T. MOSES JONES

As the time of writing this is Friday morning, last night must have been Thursday, the date set for the big barbecue supper out at the Aycock school. And to the P-T. A. ladies and Mr. Poe I wish to state that I greatly appreciate their kind invitation to come out and eat with them and meet the folks of that community. But I had previously accepted an invitation out to Sam Blackwell's corn shucking supper. (Miss Maggie Garrett, did you hear that?)

So I truly hope the barbecue supper turned out to be a highly de-appetizing, as well as financial, success, and that all who attended had a nice time. As for the supper I attended, well it seemed from the spread of food on the table, that preparations had been going on for weeks. But I am about to get ahead of things. Fenton Seat met me on the corner about six-thirty, as soon as he got off from work. We went by his house for his wife and baby, and also collected James Regan, the next door boy, and away we went down the Virginia cad-ascoting, until we turned off on the dirt road.

When we got there the yard was all of cars and we at once began to see that all the supper had been eaten. The crowd had already eaten dinner, and some of the men were some and did not stay to supper. Several tables full had finished supper, but there was plenty for us. I here ask the operator to kindly work himself up into a slight sense of disconsciousability, so that he can set this copy without it making any impressions on his mind, as I am going to mention the names of several things which might tantalize him. This is what was on the table, and I ate some of each mentioned article: water and coffee; biscuits and corn bread; chicken and dressing; sweet potato pudding and coconut pie; beef and ham; butterbeans and turnips, cabbage and brussels sprouts; peach pickle and—I don't remember the rest, but that was enough.

The funniest think I almost ever heard was Mrs. Blackwell telling the ladies this: "I have dreaded this day ever since we planted corn." And yet, there is as much truth and reason in that as anything I ever heard spoken, for it is something to dread to fix dinner and supper for thirty or forty folks and have something good in them to eat.

And after our table full, there were yet some of the ladies who had not eaten. Then we went into the parlor and heard Clarence Bailey spin some of his yarns, and they are yarns of a par-excellent variety. The radio ran a while, and then Fenton and Creighton and myself gave them a good fooling in the line of music. But the crowd sang a lot of songs which drowned our racket and the singing was very good.

It would not have been complete without George West and family. And then there were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Critcher and family; Mrs. Lellie Seat and Creighton and Miss Nennie Tatum.

Bob Lee Hart sat in the corner, just like little Jack Horner, and looked like he was skeered to speak to any one. He never will get married if he doesn't learn to talk more, and faster, and longer.

With this I again bid you a-dew! T. MOSES JONES.

Bruce Barton praises what he calls the "reborn" party of Republicans. Inasmuch as the question of the young man's education is bound to come up sooner or later, we'd like to suggest that there are some good schools in Maine and Vermont.
