

Religion In Fight Over Vaccinations

Daily Dispatch Bureau, in the Sir Walter Hotel. (BY LYNN NISBET)

Raleigh, Feb. 24.—Declared by its introducer, Senator Tom Long, to be revolutionary, the proposed law requiring immunization of children against diphtheria has occasioned rather prolonged debate in the senate.

From the viewpoint of a country doctor, Senator Long presents the deplorable diphtheria situation, and predicts that if his bill becomes law, diphtheria will within one generation become as rare in North Carolina as bubonic plague or yellow fever.

Senators Tom Gold, "Doggie" Hatcher and Hampton Price expressed concern for the traditional religious freedom of Americans. The same idea had been advanced in the health committee meeting and Dr. Long sponsored an amendment which he thought took care of it, but Senators Gold and Price doubted it.

Briefly, the bill makes it compulsory for parents and guardians of children between the ages of six months and twelve months to have them vaccinated against diphtheria. They would be denied admission to public schools without such immunization. Provision is made for the service to be performed without cost to the child, his parents or guardian.

The committee suggested an amendment making exceptions and exemptions from the law discretionary with the county board of health. Dr. Long's idea is that local boards would respect the religious convictions of local citizens. Senator Gold and Price offered an amendment very specifically exempting from the law "recognized members of any religious denomination the tenets of which disapproved of medical treatment and believe in faith healing."

The senate adopted that amendment, though further consideration of the bill was deferred and the action may later be changed.

were seized and taken to the political police bureau in 12 vans.

Scores of the Hungarists throughout the country were arrested as they resisted the campaign. Yesterday a Hungarian parliamentary representative told newsmen he expected the party to be disbanded today.

It was learned from reliable sources that the party generally was expecting the police measures and had formed another organization. Its new name was not yet determined. Membership in the Hungarist party was estimated at more than 1,000,000.

moonshine during prohibition are at it again. This was the explanation Congress received today for the large number of illicit stills seized in the Carolinas and other southern states during the 1938 fiscal year. Published testimony on the 1940 Treasury appropriation bill, which includes the money requests for the alcohol tax unit, disclosed North Carolina ranked third and South Carolina fourth among the states in the number of seizures.

Only Alabama and Georgia topped the two states. North Carolina seizures totaled 911 stills, while the South Carolina number was 675. The hearings disclosed Representative Taber, Republican, New York, every five cent package of its product sold in North Carolina.

Mr. Tillett was arguing for a reduction in the proposed tax on the Western Union, which he said would be about $2,000 higher by reason of a proposal to include in the gross receipts of the company, upon which a six per cent franchise tax is levied, its receipts from messenger service.

It was apparent that one of the bitterest fights of the finance committee will be waged around the headache remedy tax proposal. In its present form it is proposed to make a special levy on all remedies which contain acetamide. Mr. Page is one of its principal sponsors, and any campaign in which he enlists immediately takes on added spice.

An effort to table the whole matter was made at yesterday's session, but was defeated, after which the proposal was referred to a sub-committee for study and report.

Page, in supporting the proposal to tax the remedies, read into the committee record copious extracts from the income tax returns of the company which he called "No. 1."

The returns showed that gross receipts amounted to $1,130,174.80, with gross profits of more than $959,000, a sum which was, of course, reduced by other expenses.

The returns showed, however, that for salaries of employees the total amount expended was $71,886.21, while no less than $421,000 was expended for "advertising." Other items revealed that the raw materials from which the remedy was compounded cost but slightly more than $21,000. The total cost of production figures were about $140,290.58.

Mr. Page estimated that the tax on this type remedy would yield "nearer a quarter million than a hundred thousand dollars a year."

Mr. Umstead did not go into details of the Page figures, but did comment on a $92,000 attorney fee item. "I'm sorry they spent that big amount so soon," after pointing out that all of it was spent before "my firm was employed for this hearing."

He contended that the proposed levy would be of extremely dubious constitutionality and probably a misuse of the legislature's power to classify for taxing purposes. He protested vigorously at singling out products which contain acetamide for special and punitive taxation.

He likewise asserted that the character of the makers of the remedy is high.

The B-C passages were high spots of the series of hearings which marked the committee session. In addition that and the Western Union protest, opponents of higher income taxes and of increased taxes on installment payer held by finance companies were heard.
