SEED CATALOGUES.

This is the month the postman brings, Trudging through snow and rain and fogs, These early harbingers of Spring's Return—the garden catalogues.

Snug by the blazing hearth, I plan A flower-bed woven of a dream. Of larkspur and valerian And lilies bending by a stream.

Through these frail seedlings may not bloom In bright profusion, what I see Prefigured in this lamp-lit room Is none the less reality.

Nor frost nor winter storms shall pale This pledge of April's counterpart, Nor all the winds of heaven assail A garden planted in the heart! Leila Jones.

Aunt Jemima Will Be Here Saturday

Aunt Jemima, the famous Negro mammy will be here in person all day Saturday at Rawles Grocery and Market and invites you and everyone else to come in and sample her famous Aunt Jemima pancakes.

Not only will it be your opportunity to see Aunt Jemima "doing her stuff" over a griddle, but V. E. Rawles, Jr., manager of the store invites you to taste for yourself the fluffy goodness of "Pancakes a la Aunt Jemima."

"Aunt Jemima" in all her 200-lbs. of glory will be at the Rawles Grocery & Market—all day Saturday to show just how good pancakes can taste, and to show you how to make them just as good in your own kitchen.

Aunt Jemima belongs to the school of outstanding cooks born of the Old South, and she has a way all of her own with "pancakes." Just to prove that her delicious morsels of culinary achievement are not a "secret process" handed down from generation-to-generation, Aunt Jemima promises to show anyone who has the talent of measuring the proper ingredients in a sauce-pan; mixing them and pouring them out over a red-hot griddle, "just how it is done." Aunt Jemima, it is said, prides herself in being able to show "even the men folks how they may become just as adept with mixing spoon and a griddle as can the ladies."

If it were possible to stack all of the pancakes this famous cook has made "end to end" they would possibly reach half-way to the Moon. Although Aunt Jemima does not intend to cook quite that many here Saturday, she does promise all who are interested a plentiful share "on the house."

A large crowd is expected for Aunt Jemima Day, the ample preparations are being made, in order that none may be disappointed. Aunt Jemima is expected to arrive early Saturday morning, and will remain at the store throughout the day—certainly until six o'clock p. m.

Mrs. A. C. Yow, chairman of the program committee, presented Mrs. W. H. Kimball, who read a chapter from the Bible and gave a very instructive talk, concluding with an original verse.

At this time Mrs. Yow introduced Miss Edna Oliver, public health nurse, who spoke of "Health Protection". Miss Oliver made a splendid talk and all who heard it thoroughly enjoyed it.

Mrs. D. L. McCasium read the minutes and Mrs. E. G. Glenn gave the treasurer's report. Since this was the last business meeting of the year, Mrs. Wester called on the chairman of her standing committees for a report of their year's work.

A. C. Hoover, chairman of the executive committee, reported that regular meetings had been held during the year and that the entire committee had attended the School of Instruction at the high school in the fall and presented a skit on "The right way to conduct an executive committee".

Mrs. A. C. Yow, chairman of the program committee, reported programs for the entire year had been made out, using the topic sent out by the State office of P.-T. A., and that these programs had been presented at each regular meeting.

Chairman of the membership committee, Mrs. J. W. Sanders, told that membership letters were sent to all parents asking them to join the P.-T. A. Mrs. M. L. Finch, chairman of the publicity committee, reported that during the year approximately 25 articles had been published, keeping the public informed of all the activities that the school participated in, and a scrap book of these articles, which will be entered in a competitive group at the State meeting in Raleigh on April 12, has been kept.

Mrs. W. R. Trogden, chairman of the room representatives, reported that every parent represented in the school had been contacted and that her committee had cooperated with other committees during the year, rendering such service as they were able.

A report given by Mrs. F. B. Roberts, chairman of the health committee, showed that under the leadership of the late Mrs. G. R. Upchurch they had furnished a complete first-aid kit and furnished a rest room, complete with cot, rug, and curtains.

Mrs. J. M. Baity, chairman of the library committee, reported that Book Week had been observed in the school, at which time books were given to the school. A set of Compton's Encyclopedia has been paid for, and the committee still has $20.00 to be spent on books this year.

Mrs. R. F. Thompson, chairman of the finance committee, reported that all obligations had been met, and a considerable balance left in the treasury. Mrs. Wester thanked the committees for the splendid showing they had made, with their year's work. The subject of the Junior Safety days of medieval despotism, the pharaohs and earlier. Japan isn't so sore, for the Japanese never pretended, with any sincerity, to have emerged yet from the Samurai era. The Germans and the Italians, however, are driven fairly wild at the suggestion that they're retrograded by a few centuries. To be sure, their governments have issued nothing official on the subject, but their press gives plenty of voice to their feelings—and everyone is well aware that their press is as official as their governments.

Once on a time, within my recollection, Germany's newspapers were as independent as our own. Occasionally an editor was overhauled on a "lese majeste" charge but that was for getting too personal relative to royalty—not on general political principles. And he had a semi-fair trial; he wasn't slammed into a concentration camp without a hearing. It was a moderate-free press.

As for Italian journals—they were downright libelous. Illustratively, Benito Mussolini ran a daily in Milan, and he was so anti-governmental that, as we know, he argued the nation into a revolution. But now let an Italian paper say anything against Signor Mussolini—and watch what happens to its editor.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York had more than any other single individual to do with arranging the national legislative chamber's sesquicentennial celebration. In fact, I think he inspired it. No earlier congressional anniversary ever was celebrated.

Congressman Bloom is a specialist on American history and its personalities—George Washington, adoption of the Constitution, congressional sesquicentennials. What next? He'll think of something, all right. Congressman Bloom, by the way, was one of Mussolini's first friends in this republic. He was acquainted with Benito when the latter still was a comparatively obscure Milan newspaperman, who called himself a very advanced liberal. Sol naturally doesn't like him so well any more.

Except among the "bund" folks, Herr Hitler never has had any admirers here, but Signor Mussolini had a good many for a while. He hasn't now, though.

There were three propositions embodied in the three essential speeches on congressional sesquicentennial day: 1—Chief Justice Hughes summarized what the U. S. Got out of independence. 2—President Roosevelt summarized what, in particular, we've got to hang onto.

3—Speaker Bankhead warned us against Nazi-ism's and Fascism's internal "dirty work," in an effort, right in our own midst, to undermine democracy. The Hughes and Roosevelt talks call for no comment. What we got is OK and of, course we want to hang onto it.

Let 'Em Cackle But Speaker Bankhead hinted at the possible desirability of muzzling Nazi-istic and Fascist public expression in Yankeeeland in the public's own interest. But is it in the pub-

$90,000 Sum In Budget Is Kept There

The Senate went into session this afternoon to consider the biennial revenue bill as a committee of the whole. It set for special order next Thursday night a voluminous bill to codify laws on wills and estates.

Senator Unstead, of Orange, introduced a measure to prevent any State institution of higher education from denying any one entrance solely because of the sex of the applicant. The bill would allow boys to attend colleges now restricted to girls, and would admit girls to all courses at N. C. State College.

The Senate passed 27 local bills in a hurry. A New York school teaches girls how to be charming brides. Somebody ought to start another school, to teach prospective grooms' stomachs how to survive that first batch of biscuits.

INVITED INTO FRATERNITIES.

Raleigh, March 10.—Three juniors at State College today received invitations to join the local chapter of Eta Kappa Nu, honorary electrical engineering fraternity open only to juniors in the Department of Electrical Engineering who have distinguished themselves in scholarship and leadership.
