ANNOUNCEMENT

MAY—AFTER RAIN.

White clouds sail the rain-washed sky.
Lifting their trembling notes
The oracles flash by.
The lane is a fragrant mystery—
And low sweet blossoming boughs
Have brushed my face.
Here on this grassy rise
I will stay my pony's pace,
And will linger in the warm caress
Of the sunlight's sudden loveliness.
O new-born earth!
Hold to your green throbbing breast
This breathless Primavera hour
Close in a golden rest!
A Botticelli blue—the distant sea:
Tender and misted,
Even she doth seem
To pause in timeless innocence
To rest and dream.
Enid Goss Lowe.
