Given Up as Lost

London, May 30.—(AP)—The bold attempt of 24 - year-old Thomas H. Smith to span the North Atlantic in a flivver-type plane seldom used for flights of more than 250 miles appeared to-day to have ended tragically.

Three curiously dove-tailed reports that a small plane, possibly Smith's, had been sighted over Britain kept hope alive and the Britain kept hope alive and the boundary lights aglow at Croydon airport until early this morning, but at 2 a. m. (9 p. m. eastern standard time (Monday) officials snapped off the lights, acknowledging that Smith scarcely was expected. At that moment, 41 hours, 13 minutes had elapsed since Smith lifted his heavily-laden plane from Old Orchard laden plane from Old Orchard Beach, Maine, 3,100 miles from Croydon, with enough fuel for hours of flight.

Troops Still On Guard In Harlan Area

Harlan, Ky., May 30 .- (AP)-Two hundred of the 1,250 National Guardsmen in Harlan county's soft coal fields today prepared to move to Benham, in expectation that another mine may reopen tomorrow without a contract with the United Mine Workers (CIO).

Meanwhile, postponement until tomorrow morning of the conference between U. M. W. leaders and the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, largest operators' block in the nation, still resisting a "union shop" clause, was announced by Association Secretary George Ward. Colonel Roy Easley, acting com-mander of the militia, said no troop protection had been requested by the Benham mine, a subsidiary of the Wisconsin Steel Company, but 200 men would be detailed there in conformity with Governor A. B. Chandler's order sending troops here May 14 for the protection of mine operators

The Benham mine, normally employing 364 men, has been closed since the general soft coal shutdown

Greater Discretion Allowed President in Determining When Neutral Law Should Be Invoked; Repeals Arms Embargoes

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—The administration's new neutrality pro-gram was described by some of its proponents today as giving the President a much freer hand in dealing with international conflicts. It still would keep check on the conduct of the government and its conduct of the government and its citizens during a foreign war, but would remove some of the restrictions placed on the chief executive under the present law.

The legislation, introduced in the House by Representative Bloom, Democrat, New York, would repeal the embargo on arms shipments to the embargo on arms shipments to belligerents and would broaden the esident's discretion ing when the neutrality law should be invoked.

It would direct the President to apply the act only after he had determined that a foreign conflict "endangers the lives of citizens of the United States, and threatens the peace of this country."

The act then would impose certain safeguards designed to diminish
