"He is at one and the same time the forgotten man and the problem child of traffic. He has been neglected, but he also has been pamp-ered and spoiled", reported the council in a national release. Mr. Hocutt might not want to be quoted personally in as strong language, but the facts of North Carolina traffic fatalities and injuries last year, and so far this year, for that matter appear to be so closely in conformity with the National Council's raiting that he scarcely needs to be quoted at all. In the nation, for instance, roughly three out of every five persons killed in traffic accidents in cities¹ were pedestrians. North Carolina, with few dense urban centers, didn't quite reach that 60 per cent, but of traffic deaths within its incorporated units, 93 were of pedestrians against 85 among occupants of vehicles, giving a 52 plus percentage of pedestrian deaths out of all city and town fatalities. Not only that, but 746 pedestrians were injured in cities and towns during 1938.

It was the first definite theory she has expressed as to his fate. As recently as last May 11, the widow, now Mrs. Stella M. Kunz, expressed doubt as to what happened to Justice Crater after he dis-
