Open Negro Law School In Durham

Durham, Sept. 9.—Plans for the opening of a Department of Law at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham September 25 were announced today by President James E. Shepard, who said Dean M. T. Van Hecke of the University of North Carolina Law School had agreed to act as Dean of the department for one year and that instruction would be given for the same period by faculty members from Duke and Carolina.

"One of the most fortunate things which could occur was the acceptance of the post by Dean Van Hecke and other instructors who have agreed to serve for the year. He said the acceptances mean much for the cooperation of the races in the state and in the south along all helpful lines," President Shepard said.

Professors John F. Dazell, Donald W. Markham and Fred B. McCall of the University of North Carolina and Professor Douglas Maggs of Duke University will teach during the first semester, while in the second semester, Professors Millard S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina and Douglas Potec of Duke University Law School will serve as instructors.

In part, toleration consists in not asking too much of humanity. There are more than 70,000 dentists in the United States, says a statistical item. A painful fact—painstakingly obtained, no doubt.

Stop And Go Driving Uses Lots Of Gas

Daily Dispatch Bureau, In the Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—Cumulative statistical report of the WPA Safe Driving Schools indicate that there is absolute truth in the publicity-held belief that "Stop-Go" driving uses up lots of gasoline.

The figures show, for instance, that for the 38,932 miles driven by pupils of the 92 schools for white persons so far completed by the project it required 4,050 gallons of gasoline.

Worked out, this gives only an average of 9.5 miles per gallon, a figure far below the average attained by the ordinary motorist in the average car under usual circumstances. Of course, in the case of the school driving, the motorists are not ordinary, being for the most part complete novices just learning the first fundamentals; the cars are average, being for the most part aged and often decrepit jobs which have long since seen their better days; and the circumstances are not usual in that the driving is strictly instructional and consists for the most part in starting, shifting gears, running a very short distance, then stopping.

Which doesn't make the 9.5 miles per gallon as bad as it would appear at first blush.

There is nothing bad about the rest of the school figures, either. They show, for instance that the 92 white units have graduated a total of 2,921 qualified drivers, whose average age is 23 and who made an average grade on their written examinations of 89 out of a possible 100. Two-thirds of them were women.

They also show that 17 units for Negroes have graduated 679 drivers with an average age of 24, who made an average of 85 on the exams.

Eight units for whites are now being conducted, with a total enrollment of 226; one Negro unit is still active and has a current enrollment of 42.

The "Dead End" Kids, with a half-hour to spare between scenes of "The Angles Wash Their Faces," the Warner Bros. melodrama that is to be shown at the Stevenson Saturday went over to the set of "The Old Maid" to see Bette Davis act.

So Billy Halop, their leader, wrote on a card: "The Dead End Kids send greetings to Miss Bette Davis and express their great admiration for her work in 'Dark Victory.' May we watch her for a few minutes today, if we behave like gentlemen?"

Permission was granted, and Billy's promise of good behavior was kept to the letter.
