BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay "The Authority on Authorities"

IT WORKS BOTH WAYS

MOST OF US think of the hold-up play as part of the declarer's equipment. It can also be vitally important to the defenders, especially to the man who has led against No Trump from his long suit and later lets the second trick in it go by so that he can win the third. Usually this is done only when the hand contains no side re-entry.

West came in with the A and returned his 3 to the Q, clearing the suit. The declarer then went to the heart Q, led the spade 9 and let the Q win. East could not return a diamond, so the declarer made 4-No Trumps.

Had West let the declarer take the second diamond trick he would have beaten the contract. When the declarer eventually lost a spade to East, the latter could have returned his third diamond and the remainder of that suit could have been run.

Kuhn Jailed to Block Escape

Fritz Kuhn (left), fuhrer of the German-American Bund, is pictured with Gustave Elmer (center), a bund officer, and a court official in General Sessions Court, New York. Kuhn was jailed after his bail on a federal charge was increased from $5,000 to $50,000, which he was unable to raise. The higher figure was set when District Attorney Thomas Dewey's office alleged Kuhn was planning to flee the country.
