TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

Today's native is reserved and self-reliant, with sometimes a hard grasping nature, astute and selfish, but subject to the softening influence of love. He may deal with diplomatic affairs and may rise high in the confidence of others because of the ability to keep a secret. The life-work may be along hidden lines, but with some authority.

LEG IS AMPUTATED.

Warrenton, Jan. 2.—George Herbert Jones, of Burlington, formerly of Warrenton, son of Mrs. Adelle E. Jones, of Warrenton, is recovering in Alamance hospital, Burlington, from a leg amputation, caused from a foot infection of several weeks ago. Mr. Jones was ill in his home for seven weeks before going to hospital for treatment and it was hoped the foot could be saved. He received four blood transfusions in a week's time before the operation could take place. The other foot was also infected, but not as serious as the one which was taken off just below the knee.

Farm Depression Is Seen Unless Control Continues

Wallace Warns Farmers Crop Adjustment Necessary to Prevent New Depression on Heels of European Peace War Is Not Solution to Problem, He Declares

Washington, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace warned farmers today that unless they preserve and strengthen governmental machinery for crop adjustment, peace in Europe would throw American agriculture into a new depression paralleling that which followed the world war.
There is grave danger, the agriculture department chief declared, that the war, with its stimulating effect upon demand and prices of farm products, will be regarded as a solution of the farm program. That would be folly, he added, because a slump may follow the war.
In his annual report on the agricultural situation and efforts of his department to restore farm income to a parity with that of non-farm groups, the secretary placed special emphasis on new problems he expects the current war to toss at American farmers.

His Purchasing Power.
"Whether or not the pattern of the last war and the post-war period will be repeated we do not know; but we know that war usually destroys or reduces the purchasing power of belligerent countries.

SALLY'S SALLIES

Give some people enough rope and they'll try to pull something.

"Hence the outbreak of hostilities is not a reason for abandoning our efforts to conserve the soil, to keep farm output in adjustment with current and prospective demand, and to establish a rural-urban balance on the basis of equitable price relationships.
"On the contrary, it is a reason for strengthening our machinery to accomplish these ends," he declared.
The secretary said it was probable that peace "will find us thoroughly maladjusted to peace time conditions; that agriculture will again be faced with the need of drastic acreage limitation; that rural and urban unemployment will cause a further increase of non-commercial farming; and that commercial agriculture will find itself in more urgent need than ever of safeguards against the depressing influences of world prices."

Quick Shift Needed.
He predicted that unless the nation can shift quickly from heavy urban production for a world at war to equally heavy urban production for a large domestic consumption, agriculture would again lapse back into "price depression and stagnation."

Wallace forecast a need for these peacetime governmental aids:
Efforts to sustain farm prices by means of additional acreage, price supporting commodity loans, and subsidies to move exports at world prices.

To critics of the administration crop control programs, Wallace had this to say:

"There is no question of going back to laissez faire. For agriculture the problem is simply to get the future approach to a permanent equitable farm adjustment with the least drawback in national disadvantage. The only way is to continue broadly along the path we already have marked out."

Carl Regain Position.

The secretary said he held little hope of American agriculture recapturing its former position in world markets. He said the war seems to have widened the economic gulf between the new and the old world, and to have delayed the hope of "genuine reciprocal trade agreement between the hemispheres."

Wallace said he saw the possibility of increased trade with Latin and South American countries resulting from the war. Such trade would involve, he said, increases in exports of industrial goods and such farm products as flour, lard and certain canned goods, and increased imports of agricultural products, principally tropical kinds not competitive with American agriculture.
Prospects of this trade, Wallace said, have caused "some concern in agricultural quarters" in this country, founded on "visions of a large influx of competitive agricultural products."

"There is, as a matter of fact, no basis for any such trade fears," the secretary declared.

Berlin Keeps Watch On Aid Given Finns

munitions deliveries from Britain were to reach decisive proportions, there seems little doubt that many would support Russia actively.

(Britain yesterday) the League of Nations that she would give Finland all assistance possible, as the League had suggested when expelling Russia from League membership.)

German authorities professed belief that the western powers have no unselfish interests in Finland, but want merely to use the little republic as a pawn in the game against Germany. These sources said sarcastically that if English aid to Finland turns out to be on a par with that given Poland, then Germany has absolutely no objections.
