

Banned from School, They Open Their Own

The ten Pensauken, N. J., school children ousted from classes because they were not vaccinated against small-pox are pictured at their desks in a room last Fall. In protest against resolution banning the children from the public schools, the four families involved banded together and furnished the classroom in the home of Adolph Greening. One father said he objected to vaccination on scientific grounds; the other families were opposed for religious reasons.

Off for a Breath-Taking Ride Over the Ice

Here's the latest in winter thrills. Percy Cameron acts as driver for Margaret and Henrietta Arasz as they set out on a breath-taking ride in an "ice-cycle." They are pictured in front of the Laurel in the Pines, Lakewood, N. J. (Central Press)

Red Brain Trust Stumped

Glamour for Finland

Year-Old Miracle

Philip Carney

Born eight minutes after his mother's death, by caesarian operation, Philip Kenneth Carney is pictured as he celebrated his first birthday in New York. The boy, whose case excited much interest in medical circles, now weighs 32 pounds and is ruggedly healthy. (Central Press)

Each Hour a Purl

Backgammon, tennis and the other usual methods of passing the time in the Sunny South are passe in Palm Beach this year, with female members of the winter colony busily plying their needles to provide socks, scarves, sweaters and helmets for Europe's soldiers. Busily purling here is little Sheila Mackintosh, daughter of Capt. Alastair Mackintosh. (Central Press)

This is France—Not Finland

Contrary to general belief, the Finnish stunt of using white coveralls over uniforms as camouflage is not new, and here's proof. This photo, made 25 years ago, shows British snipers, dressed to blend with the snow, going over the top in the World War's Artois sector. (Central Press)

Stop Him If You've Heard It

The man with the male version of the up-do coiffure is Thomas Jackson, enjoying a demonstration of the Cabot Holtz electro-static machine at the New York Museum of Science and Natural History, during which 50,000 volts pass through his body. The machine is the same sort used to smash atoms. (Central Press)

Smiles at Death

Walter D. Buck, 35, of White Plains, N. Y., got into his car, attached a rubber hose leading from the exhaust to his mouth. A passerby saw him slumped on front seat. Rescue squad arrived in time. This photo was made as he opened his eyes and smiled. But he wasn't grateful, fought his rescuers. (Central Press)
