PARADISE IS HERE

Alma Sioux-Scarberry

THE CHARACTERS: ROMANY HALLE, who wants to be a radio star. CHOLLY O'NEIL, her pal, who plays in a music store. BRENT NELSON, successful young announcer, in love with Romany. DOVER HAYWORTH, wealthy scion, in love with Cholly. MYRA NOYES, famous radio star and ex-fiancee of Brent. TERRY O'ROURKE, a singer who had been engaged to Cholly. BAXTER TREE, a continuity writer without a job. YESTERDAY: Romany finds that Baxter Tree is a staunch friend, helping her frequently with her radio scripts.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

CHOLLY HELD the radio page of the Sunday Globe out to Romany as she awakened. Romany asked sleepily: "What next?" "There's hardly room left for the programs. Look at your picture! It takes up half the page." Romany sat up in bed. "Gimme, quick!" She read: "Warm Implement Heires Makes Radio Bow Tomorrow. As Celeste, the new menace in Myra Noyes' hit 'Twilight of Love,' this new beauty, Romany Halle, comes to the airwaves. Miss Halle also is in the race for the title of Miss Television. The contest takes place during the holidays by fan voting."

Cholly threw her arms around his neck happily.

on the table unsmilingly. Cholly opened the long box first. Two dozen American beauty roses! In another box were two bottles of champagne. Five pounds of candy. Several magazines. She looked at Dove severely. Then she threw her arms around his neck happily. "Thanks, Santa Claus! But don't let it happen again, or I'll never invite you to dinner." "Dover lied blatantly. I didn't do it. They're probably from some old guy with whiskers who likes red hair and freckles. I go for blondes myself." "Dover was scrubbing vegetables for the salad when Brent and Romany arrived from the Beach. "Well," Brent grinned, "if this isn't as touching a little domestic scene as these old eyes ever lit upon. Blow me down, if I don't smell orange blossoms around here!"

Cholly. Don't you think you could love him?" "And what," Cholly said impatiently, "if I did fall in love with Dover Hayworth? Don't you think I'd have too much sense to ever let him know it? I tell you no one has ever found happiness marrying out of his own class." Romany sighed: "Have you been reading dime novels again? Well, go ahead and spoil your life if you want to. But if you ask me, Dove Hayworth is one of the nicest men I've ever met in my life. I approve of him in every way." "Thanks!" Cholly smiled uncertainly. "You don't always approve of my boy friends." "You could mean Terry," Romany studied her face. "Tell me, Cholly, you've gotten over all your foolishness about him, haven't you? You—don't love him any more?" Cholly turned away. "That," she said very low, "is a closed chapter in my life. I—let's not talk about it. I've never heard from him since the afternoon he came into the store. I—guess he's through, too."

"Woman!" He stood back holding her at arms' length. "If you weren't you, I'd almost say you'd spent hours picking out a costume to dazzle me with." "Just for that," threatened Cholly, "I'll put a blade in your fried chicken. I was going to change before you got here. But you're fifteen minutes early." "I couldn't wait," gasped Dover. "You look like an angel costumed by Omar the Tentmaker." Cholly started for the kitchen. "Do you want to come out here? I'm right in the middle of things." Dove sniffed at pots and pans. "Fried chicken, mashed potatoes, green beans, celery! Home-made apple pie! I came early just to make sure you really were going to cook."

Fortunately, Pee Wee Tyler did not put in an appearance. At least that was a great consolation to Cholly. But they were leaving Landau's at one o'clock, walking through the foyer when Cholly looked up and straight into the eyes of Terry O'Rourke. At his side, sophisticated and dazzling in black tulle, was Myra Noyes. Romany glanced sideways at Cholly quickly and saw her face white.

"I'm afraid of that," sighed Romany. "The guest shower is down the hall. Brent. I'll meet you at the silver cabinet in five minutes." It was a gay dinner, and a delicious one. Dover ate as though it were his last meal. "Charlotte!" He got up finally and dropped to one knee in front of her. "Will you marry me?" Cholly studied prettily. "Well!" Her eyes danced. "I'm afraid not. I don't think we could ever live on your meekly income." Brent broke in. "Yeah!" he rodded sadly. "It's too bad, too. And both of you so young and in love and fond of fried chicken." "Maybe," sighed Romany, "if you spoke to your father, Dover, he'd increase your allowance a little."

"He won't." Dove shook his head forlornly. "He says I'll not get one cent over twenty-five thousand a year." "The old skin flint!" Cholly sobbed. "It would serve him right if we got married and went on relief." Later, the boys walked down to the beach while Romany and Cholly dressed to go out. "Dove is mad about you," Romany told Cholly from the bathroom. "I'll bet a million dollars he really will ask you to marry him." "You're crazy!" Cholly yelled. "Okay! I'm crazy! But I know love when I see it. He's adorable." (To Be Continued)

A Once Thriving City in Japan—Razed by Fire

Here is what remains of the ravaged center of Shizuoka after the disastrous fire that burned 7,000 buildings to the ground in mid-January. The fire raged for 18 hours, leaving only a blackened waste in its wake. It was the largest fire suffered by Japan since the Hakodate holocaust in 1934, which destroyed more than 22,000 buildings and killed 2,165 persons.

Agriculture Booklets Available

College Station, Raleigh, Feb. 6.—Five new information circulars issued by the Agronomy Department of State College tell the story of fertilizer, peanut, and hybrid corn experiments in North Carolina. Prof. C. B. Williams, head of the department, offers to send the circulars free to interested citizens of the State who made requests direct to the Agronomy Department at State College.

One of these publications is Agronomy Information Circular No. 121, "Some Practical Findings from Fertilizer Experiments in North Carolina with Different Crops." It reports on a variety of investigations of fertilizers for cotton, corn, peanuts, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, wheat, red clover, soybeans, and other legumes.

Circular No. 122, prepared by Dr. E. R. Collins and Harold D. Morris, outlines "Approved Methods of Applying Fertilizers to Crops Grown in the Coastal Plain Section." No. 120 is a progress report on field experiments with "Use of T. V. A. Phosphates on Pastures." These tests, being made in Haywood county by W. W. Woodhouse, Jr., of the Experiment Station, were started in 1938.

Dr. Collins and Mr. Morris also have published a report on peanut work in Circular No. 123, entitled "Soil Fertility Investigations With Peanuts." They give specific recommendations for peanut production in the Coastal Plain area.

The fifth circular, No. 124, reports on "The Performance of Corn Hybrids in North Carolina." It was prepared by Dr. Paul H. Harvey and Dr. Gordon K. Middleton of the Department, and it offers hope that adapted hybrids for use in North Carolina will be available in a few years.

State Buys Supplies

Raleigh, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The board of awards Monday bought miscellaneous supplies ranging from undershirts to lubricating oil.

The Atlantic Refining company, of Philadelphia, sold the state two carloads of lubricating oil for a total of $3,900. B. E. Moore and Son, of Wadesboro, was awarded the contract to supply 18,000 undershirts, at $1.27 1-2 a dozen, for state convicts. The Cone Export and Commission company, of Greensboro, sold 12,000 towels at $1.33 a dozen shoe contracts went to the George Dewitt Shoe company, of Lynchburg, Va., for 5,000 pairs at $2.23 a pair; International Shoe company, of St. Louis, Mo., for 5,000 pairs at $2.53 a pair; and Endicott Johnson, of Endicott, N. Y., for 1,900 pairs at $1.65 a pair. The Norfolk Croscutting company of Norfolk, Va., sold $13,773 worth of creosoted timber, and the Wood Preserving company, of Charleston, S. Smoking Tobacco

Taylor brothers, of Winston-Salem, was low bidder on smoking tobacco for convicts, and will supply 400 gross of one-ounce bags for $1,222.22.

At one o'clock, walking through the foyer when Cholly looked up and straight into the eyes of Terry O'Rourke. At his side, sophisticated and dazzling in black tulle, was Myra Noyes. Romany glanced sideways at Cholly quickly and saw her face white.

Cholly could never quite know how her weak knees carried her out the door of Landau's and to Dover's waiting car. It was the first time she had ever seen Terry; with another woman. And he didn't look at all down and out or heart broken. He looked gay—and indifferent. Her Terry!

JACKSON TO ACCEPT ELECTION AS BISHOP

New Orleans, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Rev. John Long Jackson, rector of St. Martin's church, Charlotte, N. C., today notified Episcopal diocesan headquarters here of his acceptance of election as bishop of Louisiana.

He will succeed Rev. James Craik Morris, who resigned last year because of poor health. Rev. William S. Slack, chairman of the notification committee, said the next step would be notification of the acceptance to the standing committees of all dioceses in the United States. If approval of the acceptance comes from a majority of them, Slack then will notify Rev. St. George Tucker, bishop of Virginia and presiding bishop of the church. Bishop Tucker would submit the matter to the bishops of the church for their approval, after which arrangements would be made for the consecration.

LICENSES REVOKED
