Norwegians Prepare To Attack Nazis

(Continued From Page One) troops in Narvik again. They said that there had not been any heavy British bombardment before landing forces were sent ashore but that Narvik's biggest building, a hotel, had been destroyed. In southeastern Norway sporadic fighting between Germany and Norwegian forces brought the invading Nazis nearer the Swedish border. The Norwegians, meanwhile, were urged to greater efforts by their aging sovereign, King Haakon VII, who last night broadcast an appeal to his people to fight for "freedom and independence."

Swallows Rivet

Richard Harmon, 9-months young, who thought a rivet was something good to eat, is shown in St. Joseph's Hospital, Baltimore, Md., after the rivet was removed from his esophagus in a three-minute operation. Richard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Harmon, of Baltimore.

Hitler's Latest Move May Not Be Pleasing to Stalin

How About Stalin? What Washington diplomacy would like to know is: What does Russia think about Germany's push to its northward?

In the last World War the Russians' ambition was to scoop in the northern end of the Norwegian-Swedish peninsula, with an Atlantic outlet by way of the now much-advertised port of Narvik, Norway.

This time, when the Soviets hopped on Finland, it generally was taken for granted that their purpose was realization of the original scheme to get to the western ocean as per Petersburg's earle, frustrated ambition. It wasn't questioned that having disposed of the Finns, the Communists' next step would be to seize the whole Arctic-Atlantic coast down to Narvik at least—maybe farther.

Today Comrade Stalin has been forestalled by Herr Hitler. The best guessing in neutral circles is that this must make Comrade Stalin extremely sore. He probably doesn't particularly care about Denmark. Copenhagen is a mere inconvenient side door into the Baltic. Even if the Germans and the Russians succeed, between them in managing to get possession of the latchkey. Germany may get a spell of anti-Russianism and lock the door against the Muscovites. Whichever one gets possession of a port like Narvik or Bergen or elsewhere on the Atlantic coast, will have access to the whole outdoors. It's a fair surmise that they're jealous of one another.

Italy Versus Russia Newspaper quotations respectively from Rome and Moscow and diplomatic reports from our Italian and Russian embassies indicate to Washington that Il Duce Mussolini is quite well satisfied with Herr Hitler's Scandinavian campaign, but that Comrade Stalin seems pretty grim.

That isn't surprising. Il Duce's realm is too far removed from the North Sea, the Baltic and the Scandinavian Atlantic to concern him. What frets him is the prospect at Gibraltar, Suez and in Balkan waters. He doesn't care a hoot for the northern Atlantic outlet. Correspondingly, Comrade Stalin's headache isn't with Italy's Mediterranean. He has his responsibilities to the south-eastward, but he can take care of them by land.

Herr Hitler is right in the middle. It keeps him guessing.

Wife Preservers

Keep a large paper sack in the kitchen wastebasket. When full it is easily lifted out, ready for disposal, and no small bits are scattered about. In addition, the inside of the basket is kept clean.
