Cotton Made
Fireproof

College Station, Raleigh, July 9.—James H. Barnhardt, a graduate of N. C. State College in textile manufacturing, class of 1935, and his family have developed at their plant in Charlotte a process to make cotton fireproof, and thereby open a wide field of new uses for the South's No. 1 crop.

Some government officials are hailing this "the greatest thing that has happened to cotton."

"Jim" Barnhardt and his father and two brothers, who operate the Charlotte plant, have been experimenting with processing cotton chemically to make it fire-proof for three or four years. They have been successful and now the government is sponsoring a subsidized program for using cotton as an insulation for homes.

The fireproof cotton will be manufactured for sale through the regular building equipment companies. The new insulating material is much lighter than rock wool and other such insulation, it can be manufactured at much less cost, it is cleaner and easier handled, and the older it gets the better it becomes as a fire-proofing material.

Insulation, however, is only one of the new uses for cotton expected to develop out of the fireproofing process.

Closs's Column

POSTCARD FROM OUR MOST FAITHFUL READER:
Dear Closs:
In these days when slogans mean so much, isn't it a shame that the G. O. P. nominee didn't run during the depression when they might have said, "Wendell we Eat Willie!"

At least one citizen of our fair town came very near to not living long enough to move here. We heard the story the other day . . .

He was born prematurely and weighed at birth a pound and a half. So premature was his arrival that he did not yet possess a stomach completely enough developed to digest milk. Several doctors were called in, but they all agreed that there was no hope of saving him. A neighbor who heard that the baby had no chance of living came over to where the doctors were discussing the case and asked if she might try something . . . and the doctors said she might.

The neighbor went to where the sourdough was kept and took some. (In those days bread was leavened by adding this sourdough instead of yeast). The neighbor then fed the baby with the sourdough until it was old enough to take milk. The baby (now grown up) explains that it amounted to feeding him pre-digested food.

About a year later he was large enough to sleep on a pillow in the top of the sewing-machine box . . . where, incidentally, he was sleeping one night very close to a river. His parents were camping in the (supposedly) sheltered cove of the river's bend. The river rose unexpectedly and when the parents woke up, baby was floating around the tent on his pillow, peacefully sleeping.
So by reason of the sourdough he is still alive, and by reason of an early and happy experience on the water he now lives on the Carolina seacoast.

Last year a Henderson reader sent in the following verse . . . an advertisement he had run across. Due to its having gotten lost it wasn't used, but . . . with apologies . . . here it is:
"When baby chews its little shoe
Just any cleaner will not do.
You must be sure that what you use
Protects both baby and his shoes."
Use Beau Peep
It's Pasturized.
"Made for the baby . . . used by all the family."

Ever since that ad. arrived we've been imagining babies eating shoe-polish . . . and the family doing the same . . . safely, because it's pasturized. Once we made a mistake and bristled our teeth with cold-cream, but after reading this ad., we will make a sincere effort . . . if and when we get absent minded again . . . to use the Beau Peep shoe polish instead . . . because it's pasturized.

We have been plugging AMERICAN WHITE PAPERS so religiously, we're beginning to wonder if we couldn't persuade Messrs. Alsop and Kintner to plug CLOSS'S BABY POEMS when it comes out in the fall. The poems try to preserve a mama's equilibrium, and the papers try to preserve the country's equilibrium. They sell for the same price, and American White Papers is worth it!

Did you hear about the little girl whose mama sent her to the library for a book, and she didn't know what it was but she thought it was "Kitty Foul?"

Hoey Urges
Control Plan

Governor to Make
Radio Address Tomorrow Night Advocating Tobacco Control.

College Station, Raleigh, July 9.—Governor Clyde R. Hoey will make a radio address (Station WPTF, Raleigh) at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening in support of the marketing quota program on which flue-cured tobacco growers will vote July 20. He is one of the scores of administrative, agricultural, business and professional leaders of the state who have heartily approved the crop control program for the next three years. E. Y. Floyd, AAA executive officer of N. C. State College, says that this year, for possibly the first time, every agricultural, business and professional organization of any note in North Carolina has given its wholehearted endorsement to the Federal farm program for restricting production in line with demand. "Last year 162,721 North Carolina farmers went to the polls and approved marketing quotas on the 1940 crop by 90.8 percent," Floyd stated. "This year, the marketing situation is even worse than it was when growers voted last October. The European markets have been completely lost for the 1941 season, and domestic manufacturers have on hand enough tobacco to last them nearly three years as a result of extremely large purchases last season." Continuing, Floyd said "This time farmers have the opportunity to approve three-year quotas and thereby receive further benefits from crop control. If three-year quotas are approved in the July 20 referendum, the Government has promised enough financial support to protect prices at or slightly above the 14.9 cents per pound level of last season. If only one-year quotas are approved, domestic manufacturers will buy less tobacco and the Government loans will be unable to protect prices at the 1939 level."

British Woman
Captures Nazi

London, July 9.—(AP)—A British housewife captured a German aviator who parachuted to earth in northeast England after his plane was shot down in a battle with British spitfire fighters.

Mrs. Nora Cardwell saw him landing in front of her home.

"I went up to him," she said, "and told him to put up his hands and said, 'I want it,' pointing to his revolver.

"He unbuckled it and handed it to me and I marched him to the backyard where some motorcyclists came along and took charge of him."

Mrs. Cardwell, who was not armed, said the German was "six feet tall and about 25 years old."

"I rushed upstairs and looked through my field glasses to see if he had any arms," she said.

She did not see the pistol then and went out to demand his surrender without knowing he had a gun until she was close up.

Mrs. Cardwell never saw the plane from which the German parachuted and was unable to learn what happened to the rest of its crew.
