ommendation that a statement be issued setting the record straight.

Word is that Mr. Slattery was more or less led astray by statements of an "interested party"; but there is also a strong suspicion in many quarters that his charges were, in effect, an effort to set up an alibi for his action in approving a Hoke county co-operative ahead of its regular turn and then making an allocation of more than a million dollars to North Carolina at the same time that his department turned loose only a very skimpy amount to other states.

When he did those two things, he was descended upon from two sides -first by backers of other N. C. coops whose applications were ahead of Stokes, and next by Congressmen from other states that had projects languishing in the Washington REA

It probably seemed a good idea at the time to attack the power companies and lay the blame on them. To those who were shouting at him, figuratively at least: "Why did you approve Hoke county out of its regular turn?", he indicated that he had to hurry because the big, bad power companies were about to huff and puff at the REA playhouse. Then when he appeased the other N. C. projects by huge allotments to them, he had to say to protesting Congressmen from other states, "Well, we just had to hurry down there, because another of the slowest markets in 22 it was an emergency. The power years, the leading stocks loitered companies are plotting against the co-ops and if we don't get 'em built The main excuse put forward by right away, they will gobble up all brokers for the inept performance the choice territory", or words leav-

Thereafter, a representative was sent to North Carolina to investigate. learned on the highest authority that this investigator will report to his superiors that there isn't anything at all to the charge of power company greed and interference.

The stories were probably told to Mr. Slattery by someone interested in getting the Hoke county project authorized immediately and out of its regular turn. This informant likely North filled the Slattery ears with distorted tales of the power company ac-

Who Is To Blame If Your Advertisement Doesn't Pay?

Changing business conditions the country over have exploded many ancient theories about advertising campaigns.

Now, more than ever before, advertising is a necessity, if your business shall survive.

Advertising will PAY—unless you violate the fundamental rule of good advertising.

This means not only careful planning of campaigns, but primarily, careful purchasing of advertising space.

Present changes have not only wreaked havoc with selling and with methods of distribution, but many advertising mediums today simply don't fit into the picture successfully.

Now you must concentrate! You must dominate if you are to capture proper attention which can be cashed into sales.

No matter what you are selling, no matter how "different" your product or business is, you need advertising.

And just now you need it more than ever.
