

Bulldogs Looking Better As Football Drills Progress

Another Week Of Drills Closes With Much Work

Ruel Parker Fixture at Quarter; Backfield Looks To Be Fair; Line Candidates Show Up Well; The Entire Squad in Top Condition and Working Hard.

Today's drills brought to a close another week's work for Henderson high school bulldog gridders, and Coach Fred Kilpatrick is more than pleased with the work shown by the lads during the pre-season workouts.

The entire squad is in top condition, and has not been hit by the injury jinx. Kilpatrick started his lads on August 24, and brought them along rapidly, keeping them in top condition at all times.

Much of the time consumed has been in the perfecting of blocking, tackling, and timing of plays.

The squad has been rather small, 21 reporting, compared to the 67 reporting for first drills last year.

Ruel Parker, transfer student, a triple threat back, has been showing up extremely well during early workouts. He is running at quarter-back.

Parker Looks Good

Paul Blake, who bore much of the brunt of last year's ball carrying, is back, and is picking up where he left off last year. He is also a triple threat, giving Kilpatrick two lads in the backfield that can kick, run and pass. Blake is bearing down harder than ever before, and is expected to play an important part in the coming games. He is a rugged player, and can stand plenty of work.

Faulkner Improved

Jerry Faulkner, 175 pound back, is treating Kilpatrick to some nice ball carrying in the early drills. He is in top condition, and his blocking and tackling is deadly. He looks like a fixture at a halfback post.

Robert Turner, probably the lightest of backs of first string calibre, is seeing lots of action as blocking back in early drills, and he is to be contended with if there's some other player on the squad who wants a starting backfield position. Turner's work has constantly improved during early drills. He is a reserve from last year's aggregation, though he did not see so much action. He has picked up some weight since he last donned grid togs.

Sumpter Back

Guy Sumpter, wild running back of last year, is again in the fold, and is really bearing down. Sumpter's work is good, and continued improvement on his part will give the Bulldogs another good back.

After leaving these five men, backfield material is rather scarce on the squad. There are several other likely looking candidates, but they lack experience. All the backs have shown good blocking and good football sense. If the reserves fail to develop, the highs will have to carry on with an iron man backfield.

Grisson Line Leader

Blois Grisson, tackle, who tips the beam at 195, has shown more improvement since last year than any other player on the squad. Kilpatrick said, he is expected to be the backbone of the Bulldog line. His work is pleasing to the mentor, and his line mates are taking their cue from him. J. W. Simpson, another lad who is entering school here for the first time, weighs 190 pounds, and is seeking the other tackle post. He has been showing up fairly well during drills thus far, but hasn't quite shown his coach the ability which he is capable of displaying.

Shifted to End

Howard Faulkner, tackle last year, is shifted to an end position, where his effective work can really count. Faulkner is the bruising type of ball player, hard tackler, hard blocker, and last year was his first ever in football. He learned a lot during the season, and is back in camp with a determination to put it in practice.

Center Fight

Thomas Bobbitt and Ned Adams are fighting it out for the starting center position. Neither has shown a decided advantage over the other. Bobbitt saw work in the line last year, and may round into a better ball player than Adams.

At the guard positions, there will be two light fellows. Davada Loughlin and Carlos Mills, both 150-pounders, look to have the inside track over James Stewart and Wilbur Williams, though the fight there may see several changes before the opening game.

At the other end position, Clinton Jones, J. D. Whaley, James Archer, Johnson are scrapping hard. Whaley is a pretty good ball player, and has the size that should make him into a starter. The other lads are giving him a fight for the position.

Reserves Scrapping

Richard Johnson, Walter Alston, Durwood Hedgepeth have shown their work in the line, and have served notice that they are out for a starting position. Their work for the next two weeks will determine whether they get a call to start in the Norlina contest two weeks from today.

Those reporting for drills after the opening of school have to fit right in with the drills of that day, and must scrap for the positions along with the lads who are in top condition. Late reporters are at a decided disadvantage for Kilpatrick has a scrapping squad that is out for but one thing this year, a string of victories.

Bulls Meet Red Sox In Durham Next

Durham, Sept. 13.—The Durham Bulls, entrenched in the final round of the Piedmont League's Shaughnessy series, will make their last local stand of the current season, starting Saturday night, when they clash with the Rocky Mount Red Sox, the other finalists in the seething playoff competition.

The game will get under way at 8 o'clock and will be followed by a Sunday afternoon contest at 3 p. m. The Series is for the best four out of seven contests. The schedule called for the first two games to be played in Rocky Mount, Thursday and Friday night. Unless one team should win four straight, the next three games were set for Durham on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. If further games are necessary, the teams will return to Rocky Mount for the finish.

As the schedule stands, Bull fans are assured of seeing Cotton Hill, their favorite pitching ace, in action. He is due to hurl either the Saturday night or Sunday afternoon contest.

NOT MANY TICKETS FOR BIG GAMES LEFT

Chapel Hill, Sept. 13.—Only about five hundred tickets remain on sale here for the Carolina-Duke football game.

Since announcement last week-end that 3,000 possible seats had been made available through the generosity of William Rand Kenan, Jr., donor of Kenan Stadium, the sale of tickets has been brisk.

Addition of the 3,000 seats will give the stadium a total seating capacity of 41,000 for this game.

Taking their cue from the record advance sale for the Carolina-Duke game, football fans are making reservations for the other games much earlier than usual. The advance orders for the Wake Forest game, September 28, and the homecoming game with Tulane on October 26 are especially heavy. All seats between the 20-yard lines on the south side have been reserved for the Tulane game, although there are plenty available on the North side.

Scripture—Psalm 139. By Alfred J. Buescher

Whither shall I go from Thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: If I make my bed in hell, behold Thou art there.

If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shalt Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me, declares the psalmist.

If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; . . . the darkness and the light are alike to Thee.

Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. (GOLDEN TEXT—John 14:23.)

Carolina Sophomore Line Has More Weight Than Vets

Scales Few Pounds More Than Regulars, Though Lacking Experience; Work Pushed Rapidly for Contest With Appalachian.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 13.—Carolina's sophomore line today was like the little brother who grew up—it was bigger and heavier than the veteran varsity.

The difference in the average, however, was slight—193 1-2 to 191 pounds—and the youngsters still had a lot to learn and a long way to catch up with the old heads, as they knew from this week's tests.

Both outfits have been working early and late to get ready for Appalachian's North State champs and Wake Forest's national rushing leaders. And the veterans, led by Co-Captains Severin and Kimball, have looked very good at blocking in spots and the rookies fair. Both showed need of more defensive work.

The varsity line, which has shown signs of developing into a fast, smart, hard-hitting, though not massive unit, looked about set today except for two positions.

The pivot job was still a toss-up between Bob Smith, 1939 regular, and his up-and-coming understudy, Carl Suntheimer. And right end was wide open between Stewart Richardson, who has been hampered by a minor injury; Mike Bobbitt, ex-halfback, who has been coming fast, and Soph Howard Hodges.

Dick Sieck, rangy 192-pound under-dick, appeared today to have gained the inside track at left tackle, while Dick White looked like a fixture at his new guard berth, where he has strengthened the blocking considerably.

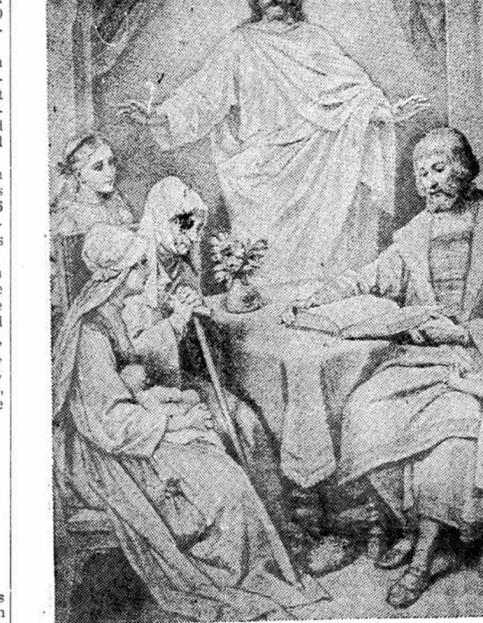

The other posts were all manned by regulars and alternates from last year and looked adequate with Co-Captains Severin at left end and Kimball at right tackle, and Bill Faircloth at guard.

Although the Carolina linemen's average is not big as major lines go,

The Golden Text

The presence of the Lord. "If a man love Me, he will keep My word: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him."—John 14:23.

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Sept. 15 is Psalm 139, the Golden Text being John 14:23. "If a man love Me, he will keep My word: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him.")

This is our last lesson on the psalms for some time, and this 139th psalm is a beautiful one with which to close this series of lessons. We do not know when this psalm was written, only from its title we know it to be in the time of David; and nothing in the psalm indicates at what place it was written.

It is written in a devout mood, when the psalmist realized how omniscient—all present—is God; that the creator of man must know everything about him, his bodily make-up, his nature, his soul and spirit.

"Thou knowest my downings and mine uprisings; Thou understandest my thought afar off." Have you ever tried to read another person's thoughts? All of us have at some time when we were very anxious to get the other's reactions to something. Sometimes we can do it very well, too, when the minds of both of us are occupied by the same trend of thought. But if the person whose thought we are trying to read does not want us to know what he is thinking, he can put on a "poker face," a mask of expressionlessness, and we cannot tell what his thoughts are.

We cannot do that with our Creator. He made us and He knows how our minds work because He created every bit of us. If our thoughts are not good, it is a startling thing to think that they are known—a strong incentive to keep our thoughts on higher things.

The psalmist's thought goes further, to the impossibility of escaping or hiding from the Maker. We can hide from our parents, from our playmates and friends, from our neighbors and the government for a time, at least, if we have done enough wrong to warrant police search for us. But from the Maker of all we cannot hide. In most beautiful language the psalmist illustrates this thought:

"Whither shall I go from Thy spirit? Or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: If I make my bed in Sheol (hell), behold Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; Even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say: Surely the darkness shall overwhelm me, and the light about me shall be night; Even the darkness hideth not from Thee. But the night shineth as the day: The darkness and the light are both alike to Thee."

This should be a comforting thought, not a frightening one. God made us. He knows us—our weakness and strength—and He is with us always, in darkness and light, in joy and sorrow.

Suddenly the psalmist turns from this happy and peaceful thought to one, seemingly of anger and hatred, urging God to slay the wicked and asserting his hatred for the enemies of the Lord. Thinking of God as love, justice, truth, righteousness, it is easy to feel intense anger at the wickedness, hatred, falsehood, cruelty, injustice we see on every hand. We can be filled with love, sympathy and understanding toward all men, but feel still a burning hatred of all this wickedness. Even Jesus showed a righteous anger toward those who defamed God's house, and showed it by driving the cheating money changers from the temple.

The last two verses of the psalm are a prayer and an opening of the heart of Jehovah:

"Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: And see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

Our Golden Text is taken from John 14:23, where Jesus answers one Judas, not Judas Iscariot, saying: "If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and make Our abode with him."

Little Trading In Stock Mart

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Baffled by the inconclusive status of the war in England, traders generally stood aside in today's stock market, permitting leaders to drift either way by fractions.

So slight was the trading range that only about 250,000 shares changed hands during the entire session. At the close plus and minus signs were about equal.
