Warren Steps Up

Lindsay Warren's fellow Tar Heels are of one accord in extending to him congratulations and best wishes in the promotion that has come to him in elevation to the office of comptroller general of the United States...

Warren was one of the State's best known and most influential representatives in Washington. He stood ace high in the House, where he served some seven or eight terms, and where higher honors awaited had he chosen to remain.

He may not be the best qualified man in the nation for the office he has accepted, but he is in many respects eminently fitted for discharge of the duties that devolve upon him.

But Vote

Next Tuesday is election day in Vance county, in North Carolina, in the nation at large. It is the occasion of the quadrennial presidential balloting, and all hands everywhere who are eligible are supposed to have a voice in the selection of officialdom to serve for the next two or four years.

The highest privilege of a citizen in a democracy is that of exercising the ballot in determining those who will hold office and in helping to decide the course of government.

OTHERS VIEWS

PRaises ROOSEVELT

To the Editor: I quote from page five the Durham Sun Tuesday, October 29, 1940: "NO THIRD TERM"

"North Carolina Democrats for Willkie. "It will be said for a thousand years that October 23, 1940, was the day that millions of Americans, regardless of party affiliations, organized to defeat a third term for any man."

Let me first inform you that there is no such creature in North Carolina as Willkie Democrat.

Also please be advised that it will be said for the next two thousand years that the only time in the history of this country that we did not have any government was in the Harding and Hoover administration. The government is supposed to be for the people, and by the people. And here is what was for the people in Hoover's administration, long hours, low wages, sweat shops, depression, bank failures, mortgage foreclosures on farms and homes, Hoover carts, overalls without pockets, short school terms, forty dollar per month school teachers, low price farm products, soup kitchens and bread lines, eggs six cents a dozen, sweet potatoes twenty-five cents a multitude of voting men into office. Here, where the outcome is always one-sided and overwhelming, the decision was reached last May. But there is a State ticket as well as national. And in all of these fields every qualified voter has the right to as much voice as any other person—rich or poor, prominent or humble, influential or insignificant. A vote is a vote, for a' that.

So that on next Tuesday each of us has the right and the privilege of becoming, for a day at least, a king or a queen. In this land the individual citizen is sovereign.

Go to the polls, then, and accept the blessing for which thousands of patriotic, red-blooded Americans have fought and died to vouchsafe to you. Vote as you please—but vote.

Government Pay

Skilled workers are being called for to do important work at army posts, training camps, in ship yards and elsewhere, and the government is finding it a bit more difficult to get them than might have been supposed. In view of the millions of persons reputed to be without jobs and unable to get them. Because of this scarcity, labor of this type is at a premium and is able to command fancy pay for its services.

These skilled workers are offered wages of from seven dollars to a reputed twelve dollars or more a day, with extra pay for overtime. And with it they have the right to go and come at will, when off duty, may drop out if and when they desire, and may go to other more desirable connections.

Now contrast the men in the regular army, the National Guard and those from the conscription ranks, who will serve as long as the government requires their time, abilities and energies, at a dollar a day, unless they hold higher positions in the organization. When they sign up they are in for a specified time and without the right or privilege to get out or to go where they will when they like. Of course they receive clothing, food and all necessary personal services pertaining to their health, which is quite an item, and which tends to equalize the dollars and cents consideration.

Skilled workers serve unnoticed and without the distinction that attaches to military duty honorably done. Perhaps the government feels that is important. When the workman comes back home, he will not be met with a welcoming band and with a holiday declared in his honor. Maybe public service rates that of an importance that money cannot buy. The soldier doubtless views it in that light, too. It is generally accepted as the standard of service par excellence.

But the worker gets his seven to twelve dollars a day and the soldier gets his dollar. It is a contrast in bold relief, whatever else may be said of it.

British warships have cruised a total of 500,000 miles in the Mediterranean looking for Italy's navy, according to the admiralty. Ha! Ha! The joke's on them—We hear!! Duce's boats stayed in port all that time!

The man at the next desk says a pretty girl must feel old-fashioned having her picture taken in a bathing suit unless she is queen of something.

Those propagandists in Rome and Berlin must be slipping. It's almost two weeks now since they last offered us Canada and Bermuda.

Woven wood, we read, will soon be on the market. Now mother will be able to knit us a new dining room table.

Those whose favorite football team is Army must be hoping that at least two dandy halfbacks and a good lot of linemen were drafted.

And when they say no third term for any man we will agree with them on that point because we don't think our self that any man could get nominated for the third term only such gallant leaders as Franklin Roosevelt, can enjoy that distinction.

And I feel safe to say that it will take another thousand years for the World War veterans to forget the reception that was given them by the Republican administration when they marched on Washington to get something to eat in those dark days of Republicanism. They were Woodrow Wilson's hungry ragged destituted herds. Also they will not forget that it was an order signed by the highest authority in the Republican administration that brought the Marines pouring into Washington, and at the point of bayonets drove them from their national capital, it was their capital because they offered their life blood to protect it and defend it on the battle fields of France. And sad but true the glorious heroes of Wilson were routed from under the very shadows of the flag that they so gloriously followed to victory on the western front, Wilson's heroes were turned into Hoover hoboes.

They ask whence does Roosevelt's ambition lead? I answer that his ambition leads to the uplift of the American people regardless of their station in life, from remotest sections of this great country of ours to the higher plains of civilization. Roosevelt stands on the senate floor in Washington to guide the welfare of the great masses of working people as a great beacon light aimed on a stern and resolute course to guide a ship that is in distress. I feel safe to say that there were people living in America that never realized or knew what a president was elected for until God sent Roosevelt to resurrect them from starvation and the curses of a Republican persecution of four long and hungry years in the land of plenty, the very strength of this great democratic institution lies in the leadership of the millions of working people of America. Roosevelt has been more than a friend to the people who work that they and their loved ones may eat bread by the sweat of their brow, and they will show their appreciation on November 3.

And as for third term stuff that does not make any difference as long as a man is efficient, that is what the people want, as for Jefferson and Washington's traditions that was in their day but this is another day. The people don't want traditions, they want business and prosperity. It was a tradition in Hoover's administration for every body to be broke. It was a tradition for every body to work for nothing. It was a tradition to be hungry and ragged; it was a tradition for farmers to sell their crops and get nothing; it was a tradition for their homes and farms to be sold under mortgage foreclosure when they were in a helpless condition without any help from the government. It was a tradition for the farmers and their loved ones to work all the year and be sold out and turned out homeless and penniless. It was a tradition in 1860 for human beings to be separated from their husbands and children and put up and sold to the highest bidder like cattle. God forbid such traditions. Suppose all the railroads would turn off all of their engineers that had been in service four years and put green men at the throttle. What would be the consequences? Why they would wreck the trains as fast as the Republican party would wreck the country if they get in power. Once you have been cured of a terrible disease would you expose yourself to the same disease again? I would hardly think so.

I know that some of you have been living against difficult problems of other days; I know that economic pressure has been bearing down against you. But my friends if you will organize and cooperate and stand pat behind you party and the man that has stood behind you I know that you shall and will find a way back to happiness and back to prosperity which was bequeathed to you and your loved ones by our beloved President Franklin Roosevelt, a gallant leader through the New Deal.

JOHNNIE W. BECKHAM, Henderson, Oct. 30, 1940.

What Do You North Carolina? Know About

By FRED H. MAY

- 1. Who was the former North Carolina manufacturer who owned the land on which the City of Rochester, N. Y., was built?
2. When did North Carolina, preparing for war, find that no one had any powder and shot?
3. Who was the former North Carolinian who was a law partner of President James K. Polk?
4. What was the range in price of bacon in North Carolina during the war between the States?
5. Who was the Orange county preacher who withdrew from the Methodist church with 6,500 followers and set up a new church?
6. What was the total amount of filing fees collected by the State Board of Elections at the last election?

ANSWERS. 1. Nathaniel Rochester, of Warren and Orange counties, member of the North Carolina Committee of Safety in 1775. During the Revolutionary War he manufactured arms at Hillsboro. In 1802, with two other men, he bought a tract of 100 acres of land, now the center of the City of Rochester, which was named for him. The city was settled in 1812 as Rochester-ville, and in 1834 changed to Rochester. The city now has a population of more than a third of a million.

2. In 1754 when the colony was preparing to send militia to aid the British in the French and Indian war, Governor Richard Dobbs wrote London authorities that "there was not one pound of gun powder or shot" in the whole province.

3. James Houston Thomas, born in Iredeell county in 1802. He moved to Tennessee and established himself in the practice of law as the partner of James K. Polk, who was elected president in 1844. He served six years as attorney general of Tennessee, and was elected congressman in 1847, and to two other terms. Died in 1876.

4. From 33 cents per pound in September 1862 to $7.50 per pound in March 1865.

5. Rev. James O'Kelly, who lived for many years in Orange county. He opposed the life tenure of bishops, and their absolute authority in assigning charges in the conference of 1792. When he lost he withdrew from the conference. A number of ministers and a large number of members of the Methodist church followed him. He set up a new church which he named the Republican Methodist church. The idea of the new church spread rapidly. Within a short time he organized other churches and had a membership of more than 6,000. The name was changed to the Christian church. Rev. O'Kelly was born in Iredeell in 1757. Died in 1826.

6. The report of the budget commission to the legislature shows a total of $6,218.

Raleigh, Nov. 2.—Announcement by Federal forestry officials that there will be no Pisgah deer hunts this fall adds to the already strong probability that John D. Chalk will lose his job as head of North Carolina's Game and Inland Fisheries division of the Department of Conservation and Development.

Reason is that it will add further to the feeling that Chalk invited a fight over control of the game in national forest areas when no fight was necessary. It would have been all right if Chalk had won, but the courts held that the Federals have complete jurisdiction, and so the state lost the share it had in a program which could have been made to go along very smoothly on a co-operative basis.

At least, that's the reason of those who want to see Mr. Chalk ousted for one reason or another. He hung onto his post through the Hoey administration only because Director Bruce Etheridge of the C. and D. department went to bat for him when the governor wanted to hand the game and fish job to Cutler Moore as payment for the Robeson man's work in the two famous primaries of 1936.

Under the old plan of operation for the forests, there was an annual deer hunt in Pisgah from which the state derived considerable revenue through sale of special hunting licenses. Now the Feds have decided they'd rather trap the deer and ship them to other forests than have the annual hunts effect the decimation necessary to keep the animals from damaging property surrounding the forest areas.

Chalk's going to be blamed for losing the revenue and for loss to the sportsmen of the annual hunt which was quite a feature for many of them.
