Greece's Plight

No war is an easy thing to fight though it has seemed so. Greece has had remarkably good success in resisting and throwing back the forces of Mussolini in Albania. All the world has admired the gallantry of the comparatively small Greek army, but it must be conceded it has not been up against anything like Germany's highly mechanized forces.

Now that Hitler has seized Bulgaria and will shortly have Yugoslavia under his belt, he will be at the very border of Greece, and that means trouble for that country. Greece is entitled to aid and is accorded by all free peoples all possible credit and praise for her conduct thus far. The Greek army has shown that Mussolini all these years has done a lot of bragging with very little to brag about, and it is easy to see to come they won't be due to Italian prowess, but to the might of Hitler's forces.

That must be humiliating to Il Duce, but he is ready to accept some humiliation in lieu of annihilation, which certainly would have been his lot but for the axis boss in intervening.

This in no wise alleviates the plight of the Greeks. Defeat is defeat in its result and effect, whatever its source.

Much will depend on Britain and how much aid she can rush at once to the Balkans. That will determine the course of the Turks. If Turkey and Britain go to the aid of Greece in a big way, the Balkan theatre may become one of the major battlefronts of the war and may so occupy Hitler that his plans for invasion or harassment of Britain at home may be thrown seriously out of gear.

can hardly be maintained if it is as they are today. Hiking of appropriations is so much of a habit and a fixture with every General Assembly that goes to Raleigh that each finds it difficult to depart from the ways of its predecessors. But revenue and spending can be made to balance if there is a will and a desire to do it. Lack of that is the real trouble with the unbalanced condition of the budget as it now stands. As long as the fixed policy is one of spending more and more each year, the legislature will continue to have trouble in making ends meet, just as any individual does. But the law-makers are not spending their own personal private funds, which may explain many things.

True to Form

One of the things that figured largely in the presidential campaign of 1932 was the fight for return of liquor through the route of repeal of the eighteenth amendment. At that time President Roosevelt, a candidate for the first time, promised the old saloon with its attendant evils would not return. The Outlook, at Cincinnati, says there are today 437,000 liquor shops in America, as compared with "only 177,000 in 1933 days."

The same publication goes on to state that the President "gave us to understand that repeal would stop bootlegging." But has it? When Secretary McPherson was asked by reporters the other day if repeal had really stopped bootlegging, his reply was "repeat bootleg even made a dent in the saloon."

What it has done is to restore a lot of revenue to Federal, State and local government agencies, and right there is some of the secrets of the strength of liquor today. In these times when patronage has increased and is spreading in government, which is trying to do just about everything for a large portion of the populace, money is a large and important item. It puts a lot of voters under obligation to a list of politicians, which is what the latter love and thrive upon. So old John Barleycorn goes marching on.

Liquor has not been done away with, and while its sale may be legal, it is responsible still for many illegal doings, and will continue to be. If the present legislature denies a statewide referendum, as it probably will, the real reason—whatever the excuse—will be the money that comes from liquor sales. The politicians don't want to give that up, for if they do they will have less cash to toy with.

Liquor as an evil is running true to form. And if and when legal bars may again be lifted against it, that will be only after a long, arduous and patient campaign of education of the people, such as preceded the progress made up to the time the eighteenth amendment was adopted in 1919. Strength of the drays will have to become so pronounced that politicians will fear to talk back to them or oppose them. When that point shall have been reached, you will find that most of the officeholders and office-seekers will be against liquor, even as they are now so strongly for it.

OTHERS' VIEWS

MR. WRIGHT COMMENTS. To the Editor: It seems to me, that in your editorial headed: "Just Send for Hitler," in the paper of March 1, you let your zeal to get the country defended from some mythical foe cause you to mix facts with fables.

With these same full law, the appropriations committees of the legislature have found that their grants are something like two and a quarter million dollars greater than the amount of money in sight, and they are wondering what to do about it. What they will probably do is to try to fool themselves into finding basis for estimates of increased income, which they will argue to be plausible and possible of attainment. And on the grounds of past performance and probable expansion in business that will yield more taxes, they may succeed in their expectations. In the face of this situation, and the solution of the riddle that may be accepted, there won't be much likelihood of any such surpluses in State funds two years hence as have existed recently.

The budget can be balanced, and it can be done by paring appropriations that have been tentatively inserted in the spending bill. If increases admitted to the measure now were not necessary two years ago, can hardly be maintained if it is as they are today. Hiking of appropriations is so much of a habit and a fixture with every General Assembly that goes to Raleigh that each finds it difficult to depart from the ways of its predecessors.

But revenue and spending can be made to balance if there is a will and a desire to do it. Lack of that is the real trouble with the unbalanced condition of the budget as it now stands.

Of course, Mr. Editor, you and I have organized wealth own this country just as we do our pocket money. We know it has no conscience, no human feeling. While it represents only about one tenth of the people's power, under our laws, it is made, and that labor has no more chance in a fight with it than a lamb has in a cage with two hundred lions. All this talk about what is going to hinder progress in this country is only propaganda spread by the kept press and radio to keep organized labor to aid the production of the producing class. I am glad to know that my home paper has given attention to it. JAS. H. WRIGHT.
