

Court Opens Here Monday For 2 Weeks

No Outstanding Cases Await Trial in Either Criminal or Civil Court; Burney Presides First Week, Frizzelle Second.

Superior Court will open Monday for the regular June term of two weeks. The first week will be for trial of criminal and civil cases.

John J. Burney, of Wilmington, will preside over the criminal cases and will then exchange with Paul Frizzelle, of Snow Hill, to come here to preside over the second week for civil actions.

John Burney goes to Durham by express with Judge Frizzelle. E. O. Falkner, clerk of superior court, said today dockets were completely light for both criminal and civil cases. No outstanding cases appear in either calendar.

Twenty-eight new cases await disposition during criminal court. This does not include the "call" calendar, in which defendants before the bar at various terms of court will report to confirm compliance with judgments of other similar reasons. Mr. Falkner said he thought the criminal docket would be cleared during the week allotted for that purpose. The clerk said there were no outstanding civil issues of widespread public interest. The bar is to meet tomorrow to fix the calendar for next court. The usual number of dispositive suits is looked for.

This is the first term of superior court to be held since March, at which time there was a mixed term for trial of criminal and civil cases. A week of criminal court was held in January. After this there will be only one other regularly-scheduled term of court in this county in 1941, that being in October, a mixed session for trial of criminal and civil suits.

Political Speculation Names Ramsey And Warlick As 1944 Candidates For State Office

Daily Dispatch Bureau. In the Sir Walter Hotel. By HENRY AVERILL.

Raleigh, June 10.—This isn't the first time the names of Haden Ramsey and Wilson Warlick have been more or less casually mentioned in connection with prospective political developments in North Carolina, but recently there has been talk enough about them in Raleigh to take them out of the completely nebulous class of prospects and definitely assign them challenging roles for 1944.

Ramsey, Asheville newspaper executive, is reliably reported to have reached the stage where he is giving more than cursory consideration to becoming a candidate for governor in 1944, while Warlick, a superior court judge with a statewide reputation as an able jurist, is now said to have definitely lost interest in the next gubernatorial race because he has concluded that the U. S. Senate seat now held by Robert R. Reynolds seems a fairer target at which to aim his sights.

To talk and write of 1944 candidates in 1941 may seem somewhat premature to the uninitiated, but those who keep a weather eye on the Carolina's political parade are well aware that very few statewide offices are won in blitzkrieg fashion. More often the desired jobs fall only through long siege maneuvers.

Long-range forecasters see Ramsey as among the most formidable contenders with one proviso—that he can secure the backing of a definite political group. He has already been openly and flatly endorsed editorially by more papers than usually go to any such lengths through a long primary. He would exceed any shadow of a doubt have a strong newspaper backing as any Tar Heel in recent years.

The Buncombe newspaper man isn't naive enough to believe that it is possible to win any major office in North Carolina without organized political support, and it can be written down as a certainty that he will not be a candidate for anything in 1944, or in any other year unless he is assured of this potent backing from one source or another. What group would get behind him is rather a puzzle. He has never been completely identified with any clique or faction, though primarily in the eyes of the western "regulars" in every race. Another sure thing is that he would not be willing to sacrifice his freedom of action and his independence in expression in order to curry favor with any group.

He was keynote for the Democratic state convention of 1940, undemoted reports had it as the personal and hand-picked selection of then Governor Clyde R. Hoey. His speech which had in advance been thought likely to be too conservative to suit New Dealers, was, as a matter of fact, one of the most widely lauded in some time. The Ramsey status, then, can be summarized by saying he has got around to the point where he isn't renouncing any ambitions but at the same time isn't out actively seeking favor. He's receptive, but not over-zealously out hunting.

Judge Warlick has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor many times, but the latest angle is that he'd prefer to oppose Bob Reynolds. In any effort to unseat Buncombe Bob the judge would have the assets of great personal popularity with lawyers all over the state and the enthusiastic backing of the American Legion (not officially, of course, as that's against the veterans' unless in which he has been active).

Clever Lawyers

Daily Dispatch Bureau. In the Sir Walter Hotel. By HENRY AVERILL.

Raleigh, June 9.—Lawyers are justly given a reputation for so preparing their pleadings that if driven from one line of defense (or attacked for that matter) they can take up another; but there is hardly a more perfect example of the reason for this kind of reputation than the defense of Dr. Wortham Wyatt in the case of Edwin Salmon vs. Wyatt, which the Supreme court has heard argued but has not decided.

Salmon is suing for alleged malpractice, charging that the doctor improperly burned his hands with X-ray treatments. It is admitted that plaintiff and his wife signed a release in consideration of a payment of $200.

The case was non-suited in superior court and plaintiff has appealed. In their brief for the defendant, appellant counsel contend:

- "The judgment may be sustained upon any one of four grounds:
- (1) The plaintiff never had a cause of action to start with.
- (2) If he did have a cause of action to start with, it is barred by a valid release supported by a valuable consideration.
- (3) Even if the release is invalid for fraud or mutual mistake, the plaintiff by his conduct and lapse of time has ratified the release and is estopped to attack.
- (4) Regardless of all else, this suit is improperly constituted because the plaintiff, being only one of two persons who gave a joint release for a single joint consideration, seeks in his reply to set aside the release without the other releasor being a party to the suit."

Come on! Drive a Car with "Second Wind"!

You say a racehorse has "heart" when he can turn on the drive coming into the stretch and bring the crowd to its feet with an all-out finish.

Oked—come try a car that can turn on extra wallop like water from a tap—and see what you would say about Compound Carburetion!†

For this stunning Buick straight-eight swings you along sweetly on only half-carburetion as long as you're taking it easy in everyday sort of travel.

But step down on the gas treadle—and things happen.

A second carburetor opens up. Air supply as well as gas supply is increased. Power rises instantly. You get your "stretch drive" any time you give the word.

But—this isn't only for thrill.

This engine's actually more efficient because it has this "second wind."

It gives you a car that has the life and lift you like—and still delivers (on owners' say-so) as much as 10% to 15% more miles per gallon than previous Buicks did.

That would be important any time; it's all the more important now—at the low delivered prices your Buick dealer is asking.
