

Blacklist Raises Delicate Question In Latin Relations

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(Central Press Columnist)

Washington, July 24—As state department officials in the United States and the Latin American countries are faced with the delicate question of how to handle the blacklist, it is not surprising that the United States is being urged to exercise the utmost discretion in its handling of the matter.

It has been stated that about 1,000 of these adjustments were effected in the United States and the Latin American countries. But there were 2,000 more that would be added, so they had to be blacklisted. If the scheme for the blacklist is to be successful, it is vital that it be handled in Latin American cooperation.

The state department's position is delicate. It is not only a matter of the United States, but also of the Latin American countries. The United States is being urged to exercise the utmost discretion in its handling of the matter.

plane, trying to take off, couldn't get enough altitude to get over a bar pointed beside the flying field. Happily nobody was hurt and only the plane's landing gear seriously damaged. All indications are that the State of North Carolina will get out of the Federal loan fund liquidation to long range program to end up about 1941 with no more than a half million dollars loss on the two bond issues which had a total of $2,000,000. Which is a much better picture than was presented up to this year. . . . The North Carolina State Employment Service has been asked to assist in locating technicians in certain fields who are willing to work in Brazil. The request is being handled through regular channels. . . . The matter of classifying skilled workers who are engaged in archeological excavation near Mount Gilead is giving the Employment Service considerable concern. They are certainly more than mere "diggers," but yet there is nothing in the Dictionary of Occupational Titles which will fit them; and the service is itself on having defined and listed just about all the job-types under the sun.
