TO CHEER THE HEART.

Lucie Darcy
In times of crisis these are things to cheer the heart: the flight of wings
Against a flaming sunset sky;
Deer stepping lightly, swiftly by;
A cat that runs against your legs;
A dog that barks, cut paws and legs;
That looks at you and seems to know
Just what has made you worry so.
These silent creatures help one bear
The troubled days, the doubt and care.

Fathers Night Had By Group at High

Fathers Night was observed by the Henderson high school Parent-Teacher Association when they met Thursday evening in the school. The meeting was also the first of a series of three study classes being conducted by the organization. Mrs. D. D. Hocutt, president, presided, and welcomed the fathers. Mention was made of Founders Day, the forty-first anniversary of the founding of Parent-Teacher groups.
Miss Josephine Ranes, assistant home demonstration agent in Vance county, was guest speaker, with outlining the physical body as her subject. The devotions were led by Miss Elizabeth Jenkins on "Building and Moulding the Lives of Children."

In her talk, Miss Ranes emphasized the importance of building the body above the physical body, when one has plenty of energy for work and play, and resistance to disease. Thirty-three and one-half percent of the American people, she said, fall into the group of those below the so-called line. They tire easily, think slowly, and cannot resist disease.
Miss Jenkins spoke of the importance of building the spiritual body, along with the physical body. In concluding her talk, she read "A Father's Confession to His Son," and offered prayer.

It was said that the leaders for the other study classes will be announced at an early date. The State P.-T. A. convention will be held April 15 and 16, it was announced. The high school P.-T. A. will sponsor a county council dinner in the near future.

NEGROES—Has there been a discrimination against Negroes in defense employment in this state, these negroes been ignored in the matter of training for science jobs? Washington thinks the answer to both these questions is yes, and Washington holds the purse strings and is armed with anti-discriminatory legislation and regulation. That is why the unannounced visit to this state of Laurence Oxley of the social security board is of considerable importance to North Carolina manufacturers who are and hope to have a tense contract.

Oxley is a Negro who lived in North Carolina for 16 years. He was the first vice commander of the American Legion in charge of "division B" as the negro contingent is called. For ten or more years he was in charge of the State welfare department's activities among Negroes and was an impression made on the state was shown when he left Raleigh in 1933 to take a job with the D. H. R. Co. in Lenoir. His recommendations were as impressive and as effective as any ever given to any candidate for federal appointment, white or black. They came from government, judges, businessmen, preachers, bankers, educators and others.

TRUCKING JOB—This is a good man for the FSA to employ in North Carolina or else. He is a native of this state, has been in Washington for several years, he still is dealing with the white people of the South. While not ever getting the Uncle Tom, or ever slipping in being white, he has been able to put across as much as any Negro in the state. He is going to stay in that state again.

The Social Security Board is not interested in getting the state problem solved. Oxley as he started on a tour of several North Carolina agricultural centers. "We are interested in seeing to it that there is an all-out drive supply for defense industries. We are not asking jobs for Negroes but we do say that anyone who does not employ Negroes in a defense industry which needs men is putting racial prejudice ahead of patriotism."

Oxley has been assigned to Federal Employment Service for three months' service in the South. He will make recommendations here and will make recommendations back in Washington. If the last event followed, the second might be.

LEGION—The question of a permanent state headquarters for the American Legion has been discussed for years. Previously the state office has moved to the home town of the man elected state commander. State Adjutant Jim Caldwell is for a permanent office. Since he took the job he has lived a year, each, in Galtonia, Goldsboro, Mooresville, Tarboro, Salisbury, New Bern, Lexington, Raleigh, Lumberton, Fayetteville, Asheville, Greenville, Beaufort, and is now back in Raleigh. A little tough on a gent with a family.

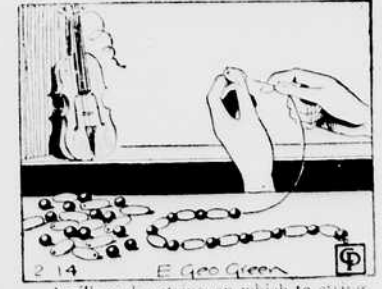

This looks like a good year for the Legion to settle down. The capital city is a natural place for state headquarters. Moreover, the State is paying the Legion offices in the "defense building" it recently rented. The place is pretty ramshackle, but just as things began to look favorable for locating headquarters, new friction began to develop between the governor and the Legion. So don't be surprised if next year Jim Caldwell doesn't pack up and move on to Asheville or some such place.

FORUM—Governor Broughton has accepted an invitation to appear on the American Forum of 1942. A. A. MBS, and program Sunday night will be on the Governor in the city. The program will be held at the city center, 1000 North Salisbury. W. J. Deary, of Goldsboro, and E. J. Oliver, who is one of the labor relations section of the war production board. The forum is a good thing, and it is a good thing to have an opinion in the group, and to have their records. It might turn out to be a very good thing.

JUNK—Most in the junk business don't see it for what it is, garbage. So they might not realize that more often they are about to get from the government, requesting them to perform a great patriotic service by selling the scrap metal now piled up in scores of automobile "grave yards" in all sections of the state.
Here is what the governor means: "If you give junk you can get away with holding junk for higher prices, you've got another thing coming. If you don't move it and have it put the state salvage committee is going to report you to federal authorities who have the authority to take it away from you at their price. And listen, brother, we ain't feeding either."

Then there is that sentiment in the resolutions passed by the salvage committee which said: "Evidence of their cooperation will become visible as soon as stocks along the roadside

New Building Is Restricted

Richmond, Va., Feb. 20.—Building to be constructed under the Defense Public Works program in North Carolina and other states will, in the future, be restricted to one and two-story masonry and one-story wooden structures in order to conserve materials needed for armaments production, C. L. Vickers, regional director of the FWA defense public works division, announced today.

The new home construction policy formulated by Acting Federal Works Administrator Paul Snyder III, will apply to schools, hospitals, firehouses and virtually all other types of defense public works buildings for which contracts have not yet been awarded, Director Vickers said.

Where the need appears to be temporary, buildings will be constructed of wood, except in areas subject to enemy action. For the latter, masonry construction will be recommended.
Specifications have been worked out for a basic masonry unit with concrete foundation and floor set over a gravel fill. Sixteen-inch concrete pillars will support a concrete roof. The walls may be of concrete, cinder block or brick. Windows will be of wood, set flush with the outside of the wall. In two-story buildings, concrete stairs or ramps will give access to the second story. The buildings will be fireproof and bomb resistant.

Smaller specifications have been worked for two types of wooden structures, one a temporary type of building and the other fire-resistant and more permanent.

Additional construction units required for schools will be built of wood and connected to the basic masonry buildings by covered passageways.
In announcing the new policy, Director Vickers gave two reasons for limiting the height of DPW buildings to two stories. For one thing, he said taller buildings would require steel framework. For another, motor-driven elevators are out for the duration of the war.

Righteousness and truth are real witnesses to God.

have noticeably diminished." That means, "Don't try to hide the junk. You can't."

TOURIST—The war is not going to stop the sportsmen of the country—the hunters and fishermen—from their annual trips with rod and gun, in the opinion of the Outdoor Writers Association of America. Now that the federal government has urged war-workers to get their recreation at home, and thus be more efficient in their jobs, the OWAA believes there will be little curtailment of hunting and fishing. But the sportsmen probably can't travel as far, or stay as long as they did in peace times. That is going to be a break for North Carolina. It is close to the centers of population.

Such is the report brought back from the OWAA meeting in Baltimore by Charlie Parker, manager of the State news bureau. He quoted the men whose writings influence thousands upon thousands of sportsmen as predicting that western North Carolina and the coast will have as many fishermen this year as last. The nearness of summer may prove an added attraction to many fishermen who want to go to the outer banks. And unless the Army or Navy authorities say now, there'll be a number who want to try for the biggest fish in the golf stream off Hatteras.
