

MacArthur Is Diplomat

Stewart Says General Now is Mentioned as Post-War United Nations Leader.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Washington, April 3.—Let General MacArthur be mentioned as the most prominent of the war, checking it off on the axis and covering all the rest it has granted, and a word for the next time after the war.

You hear this name, made in Washington every little while now. And you hear another name, the future of the United Nations, and you hear another name, the western Pacific, if he gets a fierce offensive going against the Japs, and finishes them off.

I give authority to his command because it's the general assumption that it is his aviation arm he will chiefly rely on to flatten out the home surface of Nippon, demolishing all its industries and cutting off the source of supplies its army's dependent upon to maintain their campaigns in the various areas they are trying to conquer permanently.

The second guess I refer to has to do with the agitation in favor of a close bond-up of the entire aggregation of the world's English speaking people, not only during the rest of the war but existing on an interdependent basis. Some of the scheme's advocates suggest an alliance. Others propose a federation. The plan's critics say they don't think it would work, since either the United States or Britain, in their opinion, would have to be the dominant and the other a subordinate member of the partnership and they don't believe that either would consent to accept the subordinate role. Yet they might come to terms, some argue, if the right sort of a linked arrangement were available, to weld these together.

MacArthur the Man
General MacArthur's being mentioned for the Japs.

He's a Yankee and then some. Suppose he turns out to be Australia's savior also. On that point, he'll come pretty close to rating as the savior of the whole British Empire.

Australia's loss would mean to John Bull the loss of New Zealand and India like wise, shortly afterward of South Africa, and then Herr Hitler's hands would be a lot freer to invade him from Europe, on his own eastern Atlantic side.

England unquestionably has neglected Australia thus far. John Bull couldn't help it. He has been too much occupied elsewhere. Nevertheless, the Australians have developed considerable sense. They are correspondingly appreciative of American help and General MacArthur symbolizes it, if he isn't actually it.

It stands England in hand to be quite as appreciative.

The general's a wonder of all time's.

When Japan popped into the war, Navy Secretary Frank Knox made a speech in which he referred to the Japs as of relatively small consequence. The dope was that they would clean up as soon as Herr Hitler did. He wasn't anxious in his contention that Japan wouldn't last long with the Japs checked into the discard. He probably was right, but he didn't point out that the collapse of the Japs since they were in the fight, would be a fearful job for the axis combination consisting of Germany, Italy and Japan, with Italy having proved itself no good, with Japan gone heavy and with the reach out on a line above.

MacArthur was due to signify, as well as actual fighting power. Japs' done for.

Japan's done for. Made to Order.

If MacArthur turns his part of the trick, isn't he due to be a character who can effect an English-speaking nation that will last for quite a spell?

Mac, as a leader, isn't due to be mixed up in international politics. He is a success-politician, though temperamentally.

His American interviews have proved that he isn't one of those secretive politicians. If things are going against him, his program is to say so. In short, what he says is so.

A son of a gun, the Japs is trustworthy.

The rule ought to hold good all around.

If he loses his Japs, all that will know that they are licked is not, we will know what next to have got to do.

Most general of all the Japs, MacArthur's name has been mentioned in the press recently, just this side of the place in Washington, where war was so thick that it was impossible to breathe.

The penmanship of the American is known to all. It is a matter of more or less.

NOTABLES OF STATE TO VISIT AT BRAGG

Fort Bragg, April 3.—Governor J. Melville Broughton, of North Carolina has accepted the invitation of Colonel John J. Kennedy, commanding officer of Fort Bragg, to be his guest at Fort Bragg on Army Day, April 6.

Governor Broughton will attend the 10th Infantry Division's anniversary banquet at Meraydon Hotel in the morning. After lunch with Col. Kennedy he will view almost every type of military in the United States Army as it appears, including the 1st Cavalry in the Replacement Center and a regiment mounted on horse in Fort Bragg, (above), 10th Infantry Division.

Other important North Carolinians accepting the invitation to be members of the commanding officer party are Senator Joseph W. Bailey, Governor Perkins and ex-Governor W. W. Holden.

GOVERNOR SPARES CONVICTED NEGRO

Raleigh, April 3.—AP—Governor Broughton yesterday commuted the sentence of a convicted murderer, Charles Shaver, of the State Prison, who had been sentenced for raping a 20-year-old white woman, now a patient in the State Home Asylum.

Shaver was sentenced to life today in Central Prison as a member.

He was sentenced to death by Judge J. W. Emmett, last September, in the State Superior Court. The sentence was later reduced to life on March 18.

LIBBY WARD SEEKS ELECTION TO HOUSE

New Bern, April 3.—D. L. (Libby) Ward, speaker of the state house of representatives in 1939, is seeking a fourth term as Craven county's representative in the general assembly, subject to the approaching Democratic primary. His three previous terms stand as a record of continuous service for this county for the past century. Although he has made no announcement along the line, he is believed to be considering the gubernatorial race in 1948, when the office will again revert to candidates from the eastern part of the state.

Further Jesus reminded them that God spoke to Moses from the burning bush, saying, I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

'GROSS TACKS' ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Golden Text

Easter morning

"Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—I. Cor. 15:57.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL.
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 3 is Mark 12:24-27; I Corinthians 15:50-58, the Golden Text being I Corinthians 15:57. "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.")

This is Easter Sunday, the day set aside to celebrate the Risen Lord. Our Lesson does not at this time deal with the story of that Easter morning, when the women came to the tomb to embalm the body and an angel guarding it rolled away and an angel guarding it. Rather it deals with Jesus' and St. Paul's words concerning death and resurrection.

St. Mark tells us that Jesus, walking in the temple in Jerusalem, was accosted by certain men of the priesthood and elders of the church, who questioned Him on various matters and tried to trap Him into some admission whereby they might hold Him. After a number of others had asked questions and been given answers which left them puzzled, certain Sadducees came to Him. They were the so-called intellectuals of the day, the skeptics. They posed a question concerning resurrection, in which they did not believe. He said they, a man died without having children, the law said his brother might marry his widow. Suppose there were seven brothers. The oldest died, leaving a widow, but no children, and the next brother married the woman and also died, leaving no children, and so it continued until each of the seven brothers had married the woman, and passed on without leaving children, and the widow finally also died. In the after life, whose wife would she be? Which of the brothers would have the right to claim her?

Jesus SAYS They Err.
Jesus answered them in a way which must have been galling to those men who thought they were so clever and sophisticated. He said, "Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God?"

"For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels; they are in heaven?"

Further He said if they had not read the book of Moses, how when God was speaking to Moses from the bush He said to him, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living; ye do therefore greatly err." Imagine how they must have felt to be accused—and justly, of course—of not knowing their scriptures, nor yet the power of their God. They had nothing more to say. This incident took place on Tuesday of Passion Week, April 4 A. D. 30.

In the 15th chapter of I Corinthians, St. Paul, writing to his friends from Ephesus, explains to them the meaning of the resurrection.

"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.
