

Keen Competition Expected In AAU Meet At Carolina

Chapel Hill, April 21—Indications are that the eighth annual Carolina A. A. U. track and field meet to be held at the University of North Carolina Saturday afternoon will be one of the best all-round events in the history of this meet.

Preliminaries in the running and field events in both indoor and outdoor divisions will get under way at 3 o'clock on Fetzer Field.

Consisting of 16 events, the junior program is open to college freshmen, prep and high school athletes from the Carolinas.

Eligible for the feature senior division are representatives from universities, colleges, clubs and the armed forces. An athlete without affiliation of any kind may also compete—provided, of course, he is an amateur.

By virtue of its recent victory over Duke, Carolina's undefeated track team rules slight favorite to win the senior team title. Headed by Mike Andrews, sophomore ace, N. C. State also should figure prominently in the team picture.

Duke's freshmen team looks to be the team to beat in the junior competition with Carolina, Belmont Abbey, and N. C. State as the leading challengers.

Feature events in the senior division will likely be the one-mile run and shot put. Headliners in the main program are Duke's Wendell Lockwood and Carolina's Dick Van Wagener. Three football stars will fight it out in the shot put. They are Bob Gantt, Duke; Dick White, Carolina; and Andrews, N. C. State. Another interesting contest looms in the discus among Gantt, Andrews, and Bob Haywood of Carolina.

Davidson's Avenue Taylor heads the outdoors in the always colorful hurdle races. Taylor is the Champion 70-yard low hurdle champion. He also placed third in the 70-yard high hurdles in the Conference Indoor Games here in February.

A five-event star, Andrews is favored to win individual high scores. He takes part in the two 100-yard races, shot put, broad jump, and discus. Only this week he scored 25 points against Virginia Tech.

Japan Open To Bombing

Stewart Says Raids Not Only Destroy Property But Wreck Civilian Morale.

By CHARLES E. STEWART
Central Press-Columbus

Washington, April 21—Why the Japanese should be permitted to use the air to broadcast news of the aerial bombing of their own cities in Tokyo, Yushima, Kure and Nagoya isn't very clear yet.

The numbers alone in advertising a comprehensible it would seem to stand to prevent the bombers from knowing where the radio sets were from, and an announcement would have been calculated to inform them. The United Nations' strategists agree, however, that they'd have suppressed the war's play they would have been to see the air raid, but as long as its possible, the broadcast which has publicity value and the actual source of information.

It was enough to give a shock to make capitals like Washington and London rather doubtful as to the value of the Japanese broadcasts.

Stewart wasn't easy to get any point across in Tokyo, but the story.

One detail in Stewart's account of the event was regarded as giving a distinct ring of probability.

That was inclusion of the fact that most of the raid's damage was done in "warmed and hospital" areas.

"Kure," which was described as a valuable city when a democratic thrust of their forces has been successfully disrupting.

Why Not Earlier?

The fact is that there have been considerable reports why the United Nations' plans haven't been to have Japan a good deal sooner than now.

The point of view is that an easy aim from the Atlantic coast, Russia, and Asia in mind, not to mention the availability of aircraft carriers, all this could have been done at the compass.

The island chain, which is a strategic asset that has been hard to see why it hasn't been bombed earlier. Some fly is said to be shut down of course, but the country was so perfectly made to order to be rendered absolutely unsheltered by the surviving elements, its mass and mercantile establishment, and factories and everything else that is a fraction of 1 per cent of structures are that of bamboo stalks and pulpwood. Blowing in on warlike explosives would be necessary. Dropping lighted bombs, an aim would approximately do the business.

It would be barbarous, certainly it would involve the hospital patients and school children that the Japs refer to, and women and other miscellaneous non-combatants.

It would work, though.

Jap invaders, elsewhere, would not last long with no home reservoir of supplies to rely on a home government shut full of holes, and no place to go home to, either. That about morale? Mercy!

You have to have lived in Japan to appreciate how vulnerable it is.

The Japs' headquarters, in Tokyo, is a place, with a big, world park around it, and the Esplanade hotel, where foreigners stop, is a handsome shack, but you can knock the average house or store down with your fist if you feel like it. Yokohama and Kobe are equally fragile.

The fact is that the average Jap's reliability, from the government's standpoint, either.

There Is Discontent

The hereditary military crowd are dependable to the extent of a willingness to commit suicide if requested to do so, but they're comparatively limited in number. The remainder aren't so contented.

When I was hanging out in Tokyo, as an American news correspondent, I had a business alliance with a concern called the Nippon Domo Tanka commodities and chambrays, and among the unfinished goods covered are shirting, saten, gabardine, industrial fabrics, ducks, and wide goods of 42 inches and over.

Star, meaning the Japanese Telegraphic News company, of which an old and named Mitsunaga, who figured in recent dispatches, was managing editor.

One day Editor Mitsunaga asked my wife, "What's especially impressed you about our country?"

Well, in Japan, when you want a bit of local transportation, you don't call a taxi or a horse cab. You requisition a jirikochi—a very little phaeton, with a human being sitting between the shafts, hauling you—some as in China.

Said my wife, answering Mr. Mitsunaga: "The main thing that impressed me is the spectacle of men, on two legs, functioning as four-wheeled clogs."

"Lucky," cried the Nippon Domo journalist, "you put your finger on the very thing that's the cause of our nation. It's the terrible degradation of our masses."

It didn't sound to me as if the Japs were thoroughly contented with their system.

My hunch is that they might easily rise up against the government.

Five Guilty At Roxboro

Two Men Sentenced to Roads for 18 Months, Three for 12 Months; Four Freed.

Roxboro, April 21 (AP)—A jury in Superior court convicted five men yesterday on charges of participating in a mob which stormed the Person county jail last August in an effort to get a young negro held on a rape charge.

Specifically, the men were convicted of "unlawful assembly," and were acquitted on a charge of "abetting it." Judge R. H. Hunt Parker sentenced two of the men, Coy Harris and A. P. Striggs, to 18 months each on the roads.

The other three, P. I. Holt, Johnny Holt and White Aiken, were sentenced to 12 months on the road. The jury recommended mercy for the Holts, and the judge had the look this into consideration in sentencing them.

The jurist said that Aiken got a lighter sentence because "he did not go on the stand and deny, as did some other defendants, the accusation made against him by officers and state bureau or investigation agents."

Earlier in the day Judge Parker had directed verdicts of acquittal in three other defendants, W. G. Bradsher, Les Dixon, and Edward L. James. The action was taken with the consent of the prosecutor, Solicitor William H. Murdoch, Murdoch said evidence indicated the three were spectators rather than participants in the mob action.

Another defendant, Thomas G. Slaughter, was tried by a non-suit yesterday. Still another, W. J. Green,

Prices Fixed On More Items

Washington, April 21 (AP)—The government has carried its campaign against rising living costs into the kitchen, cupboard and closet by placing price ceilings on china and pottery and a long list of cotton products including sheets, blankets, napkins, towels and gingham.

In addition, a permanent price lid was put on used egg crates, an increase in the cost of eggs.

The two major orders affected prices at the manufacturers' level and, in the case of cotton, should bring about "considerably lower" prices than those prevailing, OPA said. The chinaware order, covering hundreds of china and pottery items, including cups, saucers, dishes, plates and bowls, was in effect a denial of a price boost requested in February.

The cotton products action, supplementing seven existing price orders on cotton yarns and goods, brought practically every product of the cotton textiles industry under price control, price Administrator Leon Henderson said.

It is effective May 4 and bases prices on the levels prevailing July 21 to August 15, 1941. The ceiling is a flexible one, designed to let prices fluctuate with raw cotton quotations.

Additional finished articles affected include bedspreads, tablecloths, napkins, corduroys, flannels,
