

Eight Are Killed In Seaboard Wreck At Kittrell

Freight Plows Into Rear Of Crack Silver Meteor

Crash Occurs Early Sunday; Three Die at Hospital Here; Seven or More Injured; Superintendent Terrell Found Dead Later.

Eight passengers lost their lives and several more persons were injured when a freight train plowed into the rear observation car of the Seaboard Railway's crack south-bound Silver Meteor at Kittrell shortly before one o'clock Sunday morning.

No one on the engine was injured more than bruises or scratches, it was reported, and the steamer on the Silver Meteor were listed as killed or injured. About the only damage done to the passenger train was in the observation car on the rear in which all of the dead and injured were lying. One of two of the cars farther up the train were reported to have been derailed, but after a few hours the train, minus the smashed rear car, proceeded on its run south.
