MAY GAIN, CAN'T LOSE MAY GAIN, CAN'T LOSE
THERE IS one class of play which should always be tried, whenever it is available. That is any kind of move which, if it works, will be worth a trick to your side, whereas, if it fails, it will not cost you anything. Under this heading come certain finesses, the ruffing of a round of a suit to this heading come certain finesses, the ruffing of a round of a suit to see if it will set up another card for later use, and the play of the third round of a suit to try to develop a thirteener. But each of them depends upon other factors in the hand which determine whether it carries any risk.
