

SURRENDER OF GEN. VON ARNIM

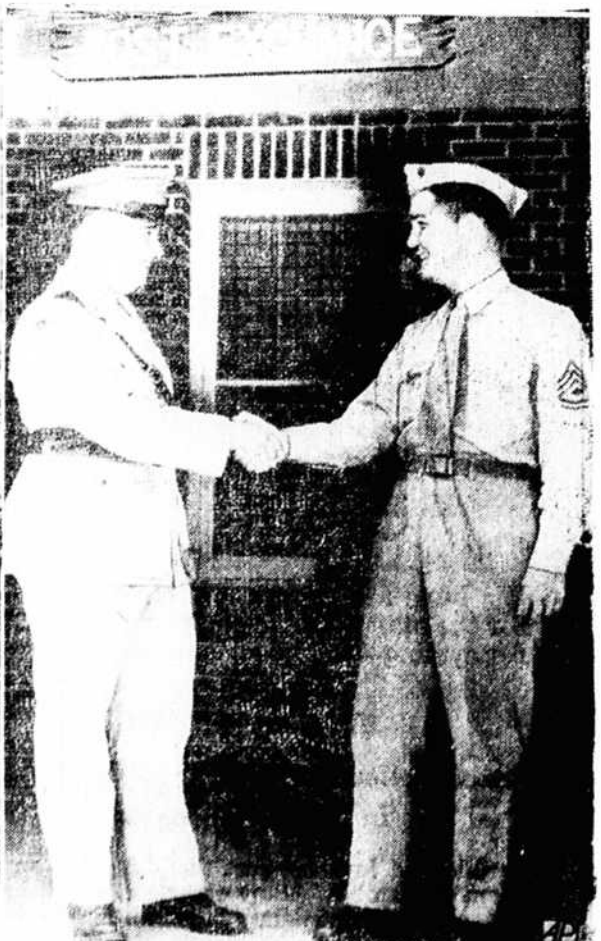

Most important military figure captured by the Allies during the African campaign, Gen. Jürgen von Arnim, commander-in-chief of Axis forces in Africa, is shown leaving the car in which he drove 100 miles to the British First Army headquarters, following his capture. It has been reported that Rommel's successor has been flown to England with other captured Axis generals. U. S. Army Signal Corps radiophoto. (International Soundphoto.)

HEADS SIXTH NAVAL DISTRICT

Rear Admiral Jules James, USN, new commandant of the sixth naval district and the Charleston Navy Yard, reads the orders giving him the command in simple ceremonies on the Marine Parade Ground at the Navy Yard in Charleston, S. C. Admiral James, former commandant of the Naval Operating Base at Bermuda, replaces Rear Admiral William R. Glasford. At right is Captain Guy E. Baker, USN, chief of base, who act as commandant after Glasford's departure and Frank Brown, flag lieutenant. (Associated Press photo from U. S. Navy.)

IT WASN'T A GHOST

"Do you know me, sir?" said Sergeant Hugh McKee (right) of Valdosta, Ga., with as much of a quaver as a Marine sergeant can have in his voice. He had just recognized Lieutenant Arthur Weiss (left), his superior officer on Guadalcanal until a Jap sniper's bullet pierced his spine and sent him to the rear. "They told us you were dead," said McKee, who almost thought he was seeing a ghost when they met by chance at the Marine Post Exchange at the Charleston, S. C., Navy Yard where both were sent to recuperate from wounds received in action. (Associated Press photo from U. S. Navy.)

WHERE U. S. STRIKES NEW BLOW AT JAPS

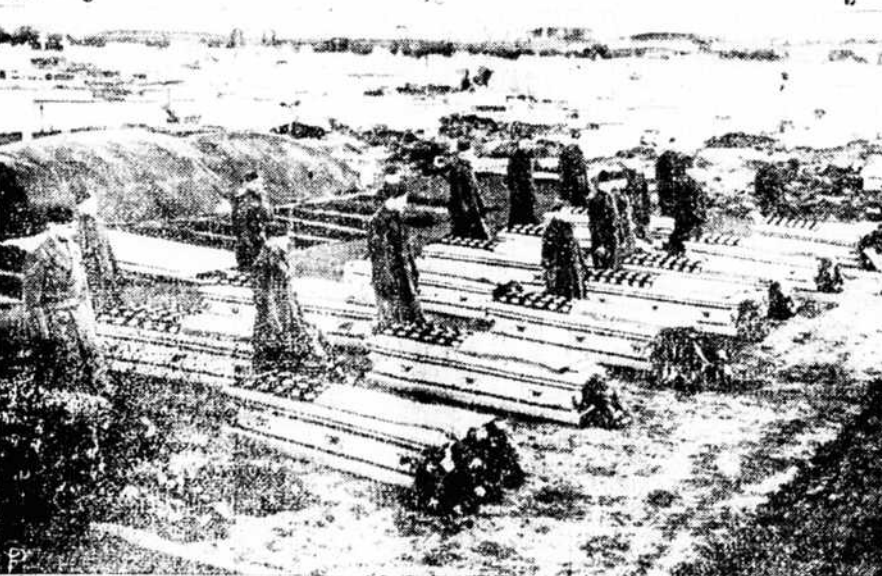

THIS AIR VIEW OF ATTU VILLAGE and lofty mountains on Attu Island in the Aleutians shows some of the rugged country where battles are said to be raging. According to a Tokyo broadcast, strong American forces landed on Attu a few days ago and were locked in battle with the Japs. Attu, 20 by 35 miles in size, 1500 miles from the Alaska mainland, is the westernmost of the Aleutian chain. (International)

NAZIS GUARD ATLANTIC COAST AGAINST INVASION

RITEs FOR GEN. ANDREWS AND CRASH VICTIMS

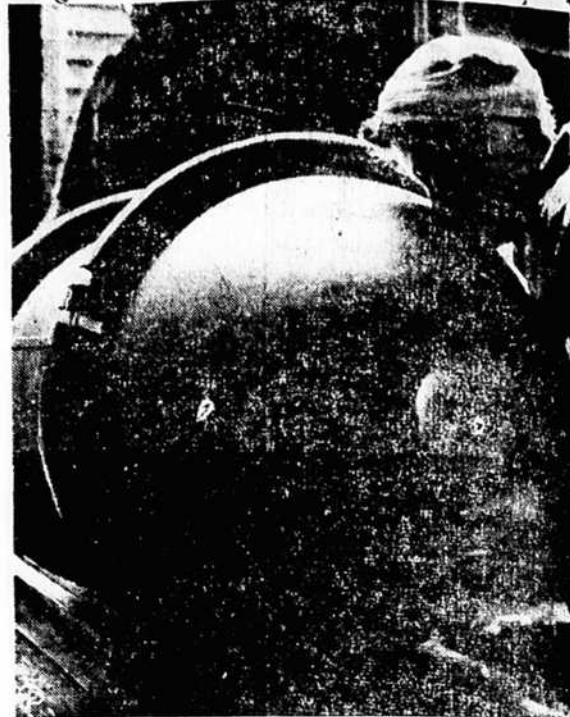

MILITARY FUNERALERS stand beside the coffins of Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews and thirteen men killed with him recently in a plane crash in Iceland. Military rites preceded the burial in the U. S. section of a cemetery in Reykjavik. Andrews was commander of the European theatre. (International Soundphoto)

DECORATE FLIERS FOR JAP DESTRUCTION

SOMEWHERE IN THE ALEUTIANS, First Lt. R. W. Tarvin, of Orange, Calif., after receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross, is congratulated by Lt. Col. E. B. Cone, of Champaign, Ill. TO ADOLF, WITH LOVE—JEANETTE

BESTOWING A KISS on a 2,000-pound bomb is Jeanette Owen, of Bradley, Ill. She is one of 5,000 women who work at a plant in Joliet where 2,000 and 4,000 pound bombs are packed with TNT. It has been found that women are more careful than men at the job. (International)

TROOPS PREPARE FOR INVASION

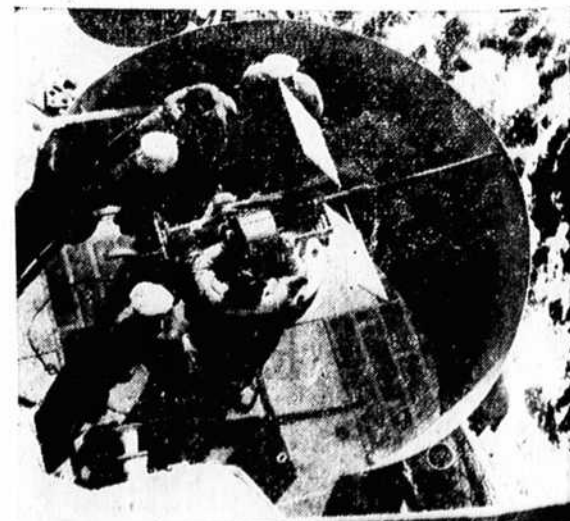

BEHIND THE CLOUD OF SMOKE and flying dirt, troops are making a landing somewhere on a beach in the U. S. It's a realistic phase in training the men for landings on enemy beaches. Land mines are set off to accustom the men to the roar of exploding shells. (International)

ABOARD NEW U. S. DESTROYER

A SEAMAN ABOARD a new U. S. destroyer races along the ocean-sprayed deck as the trim vessel heads its nose into some heavy weather. The ship is one of many additions to our growing fleet. (International)

A FIVE-MAN CREW practices firing its 20 mm. Oerlikon anti-aircraft gun aboard a new U. S. destroyer. These guns have been found to be particularly effective for fighting off any enemy planes that might attack units of the U. S. fleet or convoys. (International)
