Man Is His Own Biggest Problem, Gardner Asserts

"Man's greatest problem is himself," declared Rev. E. Northrup Gardner, pastor of the First Baptist church, in yesterday morning's sermon.

Among the problems that man faces are business, home, society, happiness, success, but none of these comes first place with the problem of himself. Man is confronted with himself at every turn.

As a solution to the problem he offered three suggestions: submitting to God's examination, praying for God's cleansing, and seeking God's leadership.

A graduate of Wake Forest college in 1938, Captain Furman entered the army as a private, transferred to the Air Forces and received his wings and commission following training at Augusta, Albany, Ga., and Greenville, Miss. First Break In Egg Price

The first break in egg prices is effective today, according to the Henderson Chamber of Commerce, with the retail price on Grade A large eggs reduced one cent to 59.3 cents wholesale, 69 cents in group one stores, 66 cents in group two stores and 66 cents in group four stores, with two cents extra if the egg are packed in cartons.

Grade A egg prices will drop one cent a week through the remainder of this month. Grade B eggs prices drop one cent on November 29, country run and grade C prices remain at present standards all month.

Grade B large eggs are 51.2 cents wholesale, 46 cents in group one stores, 59 cents in group two stores, and 57 cents in group four stores, plus two cents if cartoned. Ungraded, country-run eggs and Grade C large eggs, which OPA rules must sell at same maximum prices, are 45.1 cents wholesale, 53 cents from the farmer, or in group one stores, 52 cents in group two stores and 51 cents in group four stores, plus two cents if cartoned.

When eggs are sold as graded the grade and weight must be clearly shown either by posting or by marking the carton. Large eggs of any grade must weigh at least 24 ounces to the dozen. Medium eggs must weigh at least 21 ounces to the dozen and have a maximum price two cents less than the large eggs of the same quality.

There is considerable misunderstanding regarding egg, which have been graded. The letter designating the grade refers to the quality of the contents of the shell, so a very small or a puffed egg may be grade A. The designation large, medium or small refers only to weight per dozen and irregular pecking, with large and small eggs mixed together, is not permitted. Ungraded or country-run eggs are just as received from the nest and selected in any manner and it graded would generally sell at a considerably higher price, according to the Chamber of Commerce.

Leaf Growers Ponder Plans For Next Year

Danville, Va., Nov. 8.—With three-fourths of the present tobacco crop already sold and the expectation that there will be little tobacco for sale by mid-December, farmers are turning to planting intentions next spring. Many of them believe that in view of the world shortage of tobacco, restrictions against overproduction will be lifted on a large step-up in acreage allowed.

Many of the growers have dubious views towards unlimited production pointing out that they had a hard time raising the present crop in view of farm labor shortages. Small landowners will be glad for larger allotments, while the crop control was initiated a substantial number of growers bought livestock to provide secondary income but this year they have sold their beeves because of the failure of pastures and the high cost of fodder.

Tobacco price are viewed now as having been stabilized as result of the tobacco holiday and the leaf trade generally believes it was worthwhile closing the markets for three days. Common tobacco has slaged a comeback with the exception of the extremely interior grades while the top grades are maintaining steady values.

CAMP BUTNER HAS REALISTIC BIVOUAC

Camp Butner, Nov. 8.—When the 11th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group, stationed at Camp Butner, Col. A. M. Lawrence, commanding, goes on bivouac, it is no longer on friendly, familiar North Carolina terrain. To all intents and purposes, its men find themselves in hostile territory, with every curve of the road suspect, every tree a potential menace. No object encountered anywhere in the area can be assumed to be innocent.

Stories from overseas show that the Nazis haven't underestimated the American soldier's fondness for souvenirs. A helmet in the road, a fountain pen on a desk, a discarded rifle on the steps of a house—all legitimate booty for the souvenir hunter—my touch off an explosive fatal to many.

Thousands At Scene Of Fire

Thousands of persons on Sunday visited the scene of the disastrous fire which last Friday morning destroyed the major portion of a city block in the tobacco section east of the Seaboard railroad. Some from out of the city were observed at the site of the fire, estimated to have done damage of as much as $200,000 or more.

The fire razed to the ground the Big Henderson Warehouse, the packing and shipping house of the Export Leaf Tobacco Company, and two large apartment residences, and destroyed quantities of tobacco stored in high-bays estimated to have amounted to several hundred thousands and bounds.

The rains lay today just as the fire left the spot, and here and there the rains still soaked and blazed, despite drizzling rains that have been experienced since the fire occurred. No announcement has come from any of the losers in the fire as to rebuilding plans, and these still were up in the air today.
