

War Prisoner Services Not Conflicting

The War Relocation Authority and the War Relocation Administration are not conflicting in their services to the Japanese-Americans in the United States, according to a statement issued by the War Relocation Authority today.

Statement Administration's Liberty and Service was turned over to the American Red Cross and continued under the War Relocation Authority. The War Relocation Authority is now in charge of the Japanese-American War Relocation Camps in the United States.

And to emphasize independence, the War Relocation Authority is now in charge of the Japanese-American War Relocation Camps in the United States.
