Nature Favors the SOUTH!

... In minerals ... For the mineral resources of the South are of almost incredible variety and abundance. This vast mineral wealth constitutes one of the country's greatest assets. It is helping America to build a chemical industry which leads the world, with scores of products ranging from synthetic rubber to bromine from sea water.

Today, the minerals of the South constitute a factor of vital importance in the waging of war. In the years to come, these resources will contribute in greater measure to the upbuilding of the industrial South.

From the phosphate beds of Florida and the coal and iron deposits of Alabama to the synthetic nitrogen plants of Virginia, the Seaboard Railway has shared in the development of the South's mineral resources. On the established principle that the welfare of the railroad depends on the prosperity of its patrons, the Seaboard has worked for many years for the economic development of the territory it serves. The Seaboard will plan and work in the future, as in the past, for the fullest development of the South's vast mineral resources.
