'Victory Is Everywhere,' Says Churchill As He Greets FDR Conference At Quebec On Victory

Downfall of Japs To Be Mapped Out At Historic Meet

Quebec, Sept. 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain met once more today and began at once a victory conference in the citadel of Canada's oldest city.

This was the eighth in a long series of meetings, which have brought Allied arms success around the globe.

"Victory is everywhere," Churchill exclaimed as he and the President shook hands, grinned and began chatting.

The prime minister had just arrived by a special train from Halifax, where he disembarked yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt had come in front of the border an hour earlier.

The two Allied leaders and their aides were expected to discuss the new problems which will arise with victory over Germany and map measures to hasten the downfall of Japan.

Full powers to the European allies' commissioners to bridge the standstill between Germany's final collapse and creation of a new world security unit were believed a prime topic on the program.

A formal announcement of Churchill's arrival in Canada, which had been the subject of much advance speculation, was made at a press conference summoned by United States and Canadian officials late yesterday.

The prime minister, who was accompanied by Mrs. Churchill, was his all-paints self. He led a crooked march during the hour between his arrival at Halifax and the departure of the train carrying his party to Quebec.

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King arrived here from Ottawa last night to act as host to Churchill and Roosevelt.

The President was accompanied by Mr. Roosevelt.

Siegfried Defenses Are Deep, Strong

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

In constructing the west wall of Siegfried line, the German high command tried to find an answer to three questions:

How can bombing attacks by neutrals be made innocuous? How can artillery fire be neutralized? How can tanks be prevented from entering the fortification zone?

To guard against attack from the air, the visible protrusions, such as gun turrets, observation points comparable to the periscope of submarines, were made as small as possible and fitted into the landscape in such a manner as to be difficult to detect.

Moreover, the whole Siegfried line was designed on what one might call the bulldog and the stagger principle. That is, the Siegfried fortifications system is widely diffused, thus rendering attack from the air difficult; and each unit is separated from the next by armored doors comparable to the steel doors which separate the bulldogs of a modern home.

Secondly, the units are staggered backward for a distance of about 35 miles so that wave after wave of pillboxes, bunkers, forts and panzer works must be demolished from the air by artillery fire or by stormtroopers. Within this area, extending about 35 miles back, the first two major lines of defense are for the infantry and artillery, the third and fourth for anti-aircraft.

Behind the half million men who constructed the west wall in 1938 there marched gardeners who immediately planted fast growing shrubs, trees and flowers to cover the ground from below.

Over a couple of bottles of wine, Monsieur Petit Victor of Marquise-sur-Turcq, Oise, France, and Sgt. Lewis E. Clancy, Plattsburgh, N.Y., talk over old times. During the war Clancy was detailed to Victor's International.

House Committee Demands Tax Slash

Economy, Removal Of Farm Control Are Included Also

Washington, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A House committee call for post-war tax reduction, particularly for those in the lower and middle-income groups, was added today to the flow of looking ahead proposals made urgent by military successes abroad.

In agreement with War Mobilization James F. Byrnes, who now is the time to build the framework for the bridge back to peace, the special House economic planning committee proposed in a formal report:

1. Sharp overall tax reductions, along with incentives for business to grow and investors to risk their money with new ventures.

2. In addition to these main points for a post-war program, the committee, headed by Representative Collier, called also for economy in government, increased foreign trade, early removal of agriculture controls, maintenance of an armed force of up to 10 million until the occupation job abroad is ended, and increases in State payments for unemployment compensation.

The suggestion for larger unemployment compensation benefits was included also in the major reorganization recommendations submitted Saturday to President Roosevelt by Byrnes. The immediate reaction appeared unfavorable, in view of Congress' previous rejection of the idea. There was, however, bipartisan approval of Byrnes' plan for Congress to appropriate up to two billion dollars next year to keep farm prices from crashing.

Byrnes suggested that arrangements be made from returns from present overtime policies to the 40-hour week in industry. The CIO publication "Economic Outlook" in a policy statement written before release of the Byrnes statement advocated that workers receive the same pay for forty hours as they had been getting for 48.

There are signs that both the CIO and AFL are getting ready to intensify their drive for higher hourly rates when war production is cut back and the 40-hour mandatory week is lifted.

That soon made the fortifications look like parts of the natural scenery. The larger units in the Siegfried line not only have concrete walls six to twelve feet thick, which are further reinforced by steel platings six inches. They are also sunk some fifty feet into the ground, as I convinced myself when I saw four units under construction. Inside the units one finds an amazing system of cannons placed, directed with the aid of periscope from below.

French Now In Suburbs Dijon City

Bitter Opposition Offered by Nazis Near Belfort Gap

Rome, Sept. 11.—(AP)—French troops penetrated the outskirts of Dijon, an important communications center, 150 miles southeast of Paris, while other French units of the seventh army met bitter opposition in the eastern Carpathians after crushing enemy resistance in the battle of the Belfort gap. Allied headquarters said today:

American units of Lt. General Jean's seventh army advanced 15 kilometers southwest of the mountain gateway into southern Germany.

But French troops pushing their way into the mountains along the Swiss frontier met desperate German rear guard resistance.

An Allied headquarters announced last night that the French were fighting near the village 16 miles south of Belfort and 36 air miles from the German frontier.

Fanning out west of the Saone river, the French also reached road junction 40 miles west of Dijon, no more than 20 miles above Autun.

As the American advance reached Belfort it veered north as well as west toward the Ognon river, thus taking command of the entire valley.

Meanwhile, the enemy in the far southeastern corner of the French Riviera was under bombardment from Allied warships.

The Moscow communiqué said Soviet columns whipping inside southeastern Transylvania and along the eastern side had captured nearly 60 towns and villages yesterday and forced another Carpathian pass into Transylvania.

Meanwhile, Russian news dispatches indicated that the battles of the Pechora and Baltic seaboards are likely to explode at any moment. The timing and direction of the next major thrust of the Red army remain a guarded secret. It was believed, however, that the biggest drives will be launched from the upper Volga battleheads south of Warsaw toward 90-mile-wide German Silze, and across the Seide river frontier of East Prussia toward Insterburg, 15 miles to the southwest.

The Russians made it plain they intend to carry their toll share of the offensive burden in the heart of the Reich.

They would drop a load equal to the annual manufac-ture of Germany yesterday. Thousands of bombers scattered down on Le Havre with 2,000 British bombers attacking without opposition, suggesting that the Germans were all but helpless.

Reports of short and long range destruction of German installations came in almost faster than tabulations could be made.

The immediate assumption of the attack on the main needed supply port of Le Havre indicated that General Eisenhower had ordered the port taken to spark the invasion into Germany. Visibility was excellent. It was said likely that Allied bombers

Enemy's Resistance Is Crushed in the Transylvanian Alps
