

Henderson Daily Dispatch

THIRTY-SECOND YEAR

LEASED WIRE SERVICE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HENDERSON, N. C., SATURDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 29, 1945

PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON EXCEPT SUNDAY

FIVE CENTS COPY

HOME FROM CHINA, GETS BRUSH-OFF

FLOWN IN FROM CHINA to the bedside of his dying mother, Capt. George Ransau (far left) squats (above) on being presented to his son Stephen, 15 months, whom he had not seen till this introduction by the wife at Malden, Mass. From China to Washington, Ransau was the invited fellow-passenger of returning Ambassador Hurley, and thence was flown on to Boston in an Army transport. (International Soundphoto)

Full Employment Measure Completes Half Journey

Statesville Preparing For Truman

Two Cabinet Members Will Accompany Him And Make Addresses

Statesville, Sept. 29.—(AP)—President Harry S. Truman and two cabinet members—Secretaries Patterson and Vinson—will speak here November 2 in connection with the North Carolina Senate's fall get-together meeting.

Truman will speak at the ball park Friday afternoon, November 2. Treasury Secretary Vinson is scheduled to talk that evening. War Secretary Patterson will speak in the high school auditorium, Thursday, November 1 following a banquet that night in his honor.

Representative Robert L. Doughton invited Patterson, Vinson, the former head of State's Acting High Mitchell, chairman of the state committee on management.

Statesville is in Doughton's district. Doughton will accompany Patterson here by plane.

Truman will fly down from Washington to Charlotte and motor to Statesville the morning of November 2. He will be entertained at a luncheon and reception. His address will be at 2:30 p. m. and is labeled as "no major speech." It will be broadcast live.

Statesville is making plans to handle thousands of North Carolinians who are expected to flock to the city and hear the President.

Following his address, Mr. Truman will fly to Raleigh for a talk that night. He will continue on to Atlanta where he will attend the Georgia Tech-Duke football game Saturday afternoon.

Adm. Halsey To Retire From Navy

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Admiral William F. Halsey, who chased the Japanese navy all over and off—the Pacific with a bigger fleet that won him the nickname of "Bull," has asked to be retired at 62.

"I am an old man, but the young fellows take over," he says with a smile. "I am 62 and feel 40."

His name is more strangely subdued in contrast with the wild crackling way the admiral used to refer to his enemy as "those monkey men" and use the motto, "kill Japs—sink 'em."

The decision of the rugged, weather-beaten admiral to bow out as one of the nation's most dramatic navy commanders because of age, served to recall a record, which even in summary catches the breath.

Senate O.K.'s Bill; Observers Noting Relations Cooler

Washington, Sept. 29.—(AP)—A plan to place the government into a confidence, albeit war against unemployment, is half way through Congress. The senate approved the "full employment bill" last night. Before the final action the bill was being improved or weakened, depending on your point of view. It was changed, anyway.

The bill now goes to the House which may debate it late in October.

The Senate and House took a week-long break today and observers noted that:

1—President Truman's relations with Congress were not so unimpressive as in war time.

2—The rift of mind from people trying to get somebody out of the army or navy was closed up.

3—Looming larger every day in Congressional minds is the same old thing, responsibility of deciding what to do with secrets or atomic force.

4—Promises before the postwar Congress have fallen roughly into two main groups:

Economic and military.

Economic problems include employment, inflation, emergency relief for jobless people, and taxes.

Military problems include army pay increases, enlistments, Pearl Harbor and the atomic bomb.

Home employment—the full employment bill passed by the Senate—provides that:

The government shall adopt a broad program to help private employers to provide enough jobs for all. It is necessary if any year and a half of unemployment is to be avoided.

Young men are to be trained for the changes made by the program.

It is provided that such spending must be accompanied by a plan to raise the money.

President Truman's supporters in the Senate were not too happy over the changes.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

On June 17, 1943, he got the job as fleet commander of the 3rd fleet. From then on, the record is too much even for a long summary.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

STRIKE LINES BULGE FURTHER

Oil Workers Reveal Signing Of Contract With Large Comp'y

Pact With Largest Independent Gives Workers 30 Per Cent Wage Increase

Washington, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The CIO oil workers announced today they had signed a contract with "the largest independent" oil company in the nation calling for a 30 per cent wage increase.

The announcement, which the oil workers regarded as a break in the industry stand against any pay increases, was made at confidential conferences in Seattle an eight-day-old oil workers' strike were resumed here under the direct supervision of Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwelbberbach.

O. A. Knight, president of the union whose members are threatening a nation-wide shutdown of gasoline and oil refineries if the oil companies fail, announced the signing of the contract with the Western Oil Company, Los Angeles, Calif.

He declared the company as "the largest independent in the industry."

It had said the company agreed to pay its 6,000 workers more to hourly employees and $50 a month additional to monthly paid workers.

About 1,000 employees are involved, he said.

The pay increases provide the same wage for 40 hours as the workers received during the war for a 32-hour week, Knight declared, adding that this represents the 30 per cent pay increase which the union is demanding.

The nation's strike lines, expanding steadily since the end of the war, bulged further today as 100,000 workers remained away from their jobs because of labor disputes.

The strike along the labor front struck hardest at five major industries—automotive, coal, lumber, oil and electrical power—as the number of idle touched a new high for the past several months.

There were an additional million and a half workers in New York City affected indirectly by a labor spat.

Shoppers entering two of the industry's oil and coal suppliers pressed for a strike. There were also indications that a settlement was near in a three-week-old strike affecting some employees of the Westinghouse electrical manufacturing company in six states.

In Washington, Secretary of Labor Schwelbberbach was ready to step into the conference between CIO union leaders and oil company representatives. In efforts to settle a strike of 35,000 workers in eight states and a possible nationwide walkout of 250,000.

Also in Washington, the next move in the work stoppage in Pennsylvania and West Virginia was expected to be made today.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

"Such action" could mean the closing of some 400,000 coal mines.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

Five Major Industries Are Now Hit

New York Elevator Operators Continue Away From Jobs

The nation's strike lines, expanding steadily since the end of the war, bulged further today as 100,000 workers remained away from their jobs because of labor disputes.

The strike along the labor front struck hardest at five major industries—automotive, coal, lumber, oil and electrical power—as the number of idle touched a new high for the past several months.

There were an additional million and a half workers in New York City affected indirectly by a labor spat.

Shoppers entering two of the industry's oil and coal suppliers pressed for a strike. There were also indications that a settlement was near in a three-week-old strike affecting some employees of the Westinghouse electrical manufacturing company in six states.

In Washington, Secretary of Labor Schwelbberbach was ready to step into the conference between CIO union leaders and oil company representatives. In efforts to settle a strike of 35,000 workers in eight states and a possible nationwide walkout of 250,000.

Also in Washington, the next move in the work stoppage in Pennsylvania and West Virginia was expected to be made today.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

"Such action" could mean the closing of some 400,000 coal mines.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

FIRST TROOPS IN FROM CBI AREA

GLAD TO GET HOME and proclaiming it and themselves to the camera, U. S. veterans of service in the China-Burma-India war theatre are pictured as their ship—the General Grover, first to come in from that region—docked in New York with 2,735 aboard. (International)

Japs Told To Keep Hands Off Press

Home Ministry Tries To Ban Story Of Interviews With The Emperor

Tokyo, Sept. 29.—(AP)—General MacArthur commanded the Japanese government today to keep its hands off Japan's press and radio, warning of censorship, espionage or control.

After the home ministry tried to ban Inspector Hirohito's interviews and stories of his visit to the Emperor, the ministry had suppressed Tokyo and Osaka newspapers in an effort to keep the news from the Japanese people.

It was a major move by MacArthur toward eliminating the aura of mystery surrounding Hirohito by prohibiting one of the most important methods of preserving it.

For Japan, the publication of interviews with the ruler was a great blow. It had appeared here since the government carefully had made certain of that.

The home ministry's explanation of its attempt to block circulation of papers carrying American correspondent's interviews with the ruler was that the subject was too awesome. Apparently the ministry thought that the Japanese were not entitled to know that their emperor had talked with foreign correspondents just as ordinary persons had done.

The clothes with the long, narrow, high collar, which were worn by the emperor, were said to be made of a mysterious material.

The Japanese cabinet approved establishment of a council headed by Premier Prince Hirota-Kuni to revise the system of electing the Japanese parliament.

The Allied command announced that the U. S. 6th Infantry Division would be withdrawn from Luzon and transferred to the 11th Airborne Division in 1946.

The 11th Airborne Division will occupy Korea. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 6th Airborne will occupy Japan. The 11th Airborne will occupy Japan.

Kramer Began Brutality At Camp, Witness Says

Globster Might Better 151-Hour Flight Schedule

Abroad the Globster, Sept. 29.—(AP)—The Globster might beat the 151-hour schedule set for its round the world flight, it developed today.

U. S. Army Air Transport Command observers turned up this chance as the 40-passenger C-54 headed eastward over the Atlantic after a stop at Bermuda, with Santa Maria, the Azores and Casablanca next on the 23-157 mile journey.

It was pointed out that two and a half hours were picked up by flying direct from Washington to Bermuda, eliminating a New York stop. Another hour may be picked up through the decision to fly from San Francisco to Washington non-stop.

Thus this historic flight, forerunner of weekly service around the globe, could end Thursday night. The great plane, carrying eight passengers who will go the entire trip and one bound for Calcutta completed the 750-mile Washington-Bermuda flight right on schedule—four hours 16 minutes.

The government shall adopt a broad program to help private employers to provide enough jobs for all. It is necessary if any year and a half of unemployment is to be avoided.

Young men are to be trained for the changes made by the program.

It is provided that such spending must be accompanied by a plan to raise the money.

President Truman's supporters in the Senate were not too happy over the changes.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

On June 17, 1943, he got the job as fleet commander of the 3rd fleet. From then on, the record is too much even for a long summary.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

On June 17, 1943, he got the job as fleet commander of the 3rd fleet. From then on, the record is too much even for a long summary.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

On June 17, 1943, he got the job as fleet commander of the 3rd fleet. From then on, the record is too much even for a long summary.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

On Nov. 15, 1942, he gave up his south Pacific command after working himself out of a job in an area where the Japs lost 150,000 men, 1,800 planes and "so many ships I didn't count 'em." He was awarded the gold star for a job well done.

On June 17, 1943, he got the job as fleet commander of the 3rd fleet. From then on, the record is too much even for a long summary.

On Oct. 18, 1942, he took command of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific. On Nov. 14, 1942, the fleet sank at least 22 enemy ships in a decisive engagement off Guadalcanal; he was made a full admiral.

New York Elevator Operators Continue Away From Jobs

The nation's strike lines, expanding steadily since the end of the war, bulged further today as 100,000 workers remained away from their jobs because of labor disputes.

The strike along the labor front struck hardest at five major industries—automotive, coal, lumber, oil and electrical power—as the number of idle touched a new high for the past several months.

There were an additional million and a half workers in New York City affected indirectly by a labor spat.

Shoppers entering two of the industry's oil and coal suppliers pressed for a strike. There were also indications that a settlement was near in a three-week-old strike affecting some employees of the Westinghouse electrical manufacturing company in six states.

In Washington, Secretary of Labor Schwelbberbach was ready to step into the conference between CIO union leaders and oil company representatives. In efforts to settle a strike of 35,000 workers in eight states and a possible nationwide walkout of 250,000.

Also in Washington, the next move in the work stoppage in Pennsylvania and West Virginia was expected to be made today.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

"Such action" could mean the closing of some 400,000 coal mines.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action" as would be required.

The nation's largest steel plant, owned by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, said coal operators declined Lewis' invitation to meet until the miners returned to their pits. Lewis had said if they refused to meet, the union would see it to make "such action"