TELLING TIME.

Some men can tell
The time of day
By the slant of the sun
In a field of hay.

A man whose world
Is stone and steel
Tells time by the sound
Of the day at his heel.

And some, though blind
And deaf and mute,
Can reckon the hour
By the taste of its fruit.

Not even the dead,
With time on their hands,
Have lost all count
Of the golden sands.
