Did Outside Pressure Balk Settlement of Oil Strike? Hint Interference in Case By Steel, Auto Industries

WASHINGTON—Labor department insiders are convinced that Secretary of Labor Schwelienbach's negotiations to settle the oil strikes would have succeeded had petroleum industry representatives acted as free agents.

One labor official declared that the conciliation parley collapsed and the government seized the struck refineries because the oil industry was under terrific pressure from outside sources not to accept the Schwelienbach proposal.

This informant insisted that the oil bigwigs were in constant communication with their home offices during the parley and received through them the views of steel, automobile and other major industries.

These other industrial groups, he explained, put on the pressure to have the federal settlement rejected. The oil industry, with extremely low labor costs, could have agreed to the Schwelienbach plan or even the unions' 30 per cent wage demand without fear, the official said.

Other big industries, however, were afraid to have a pattern set which might give the union an increase of around 22 or 25 per cent. They feared such a pattern might be applied to their operations where labor costs are high and a price squeeze would immediately result.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS are talking about possibilities of lifting meat rationing—or liberalizing it further—in November. Action depends on the supply-demand picture, but indications are you may be able to buy meat without points within a month.

Positive action will not be taken, however, until the OPA and the Agriculture department have decided the demand for meat has slackened off enough to warrant the action.

There will be plenty of turkeys and many more chickens available this fall. The increase in poultry will come as a result of sharp military cutbacks in buying. This will further ease the demand for meat.

DESPITE THE DECISION of President and Mrs. Truman not to resume the usual series of pretentious White House receptions which marked the Washington social season, other noted entertainers are gradually emerging from the dimout imposed by wartime conditions.

The empresses and legations which were always famous for their brilliant and usually jammed receptions are returning slowly to old schedules as fast as imports of Scotch resume. Champagne is still notably absent and will remain so for some time. And, the white tie affair is still exceptional.

The hasty increase in receptions is due not so much to light-hearted gaiety but to practical necessity. Many missions are coming to the capital in connection with the untangling of war imposed problems and each needs to be entertained and introduced to U. S. officials at dinners and parties. The receptions serve to give the guests and their hosts a chance to put before responsible American officials the point of view of the particular country seeking to enter into any special agreement with the United States.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE CLINTON ANDERSON, the nation's number one food man, talks about sugar by the millions of pounds down at his office.

At home, he says, it's a different story. The Anderson sugar bowl is currently empty, the secretary reports. Things have reached the point where he is forced to "maneuver" for a thimble full of the sweet stuff.

The other day, he relates, he had dinner at a friend's home and there were little paper packages of sugar on the coffee cups. The secretary slipped his packet in a side pocket. For a little while, he said, his family had sugar. But now they're out again.

Relaxation and Reassurance Relieve High Blood Pressure

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE mysteries of high blood pressure are being unraveled but the process is a slow one. Perhaps now we are on the threshold of discovering some substance that will reduce the blood pressure effectively, but even then the problem will not be completely solved. For, according to Doctor A. Morris Ginsberg of Missouri, human beings differ so much that a person's very nature may be responsible for the high blood pressure.

There are certain types of persons who seem to have the tendency to develop high blood pressure early in life. They have signs which denote a disturbance of the nervous mechanism which controls the size of the blood vessels. These include blushing, flushing, cold, sweaty hands, fainting and dizzy spells. Often they suffer from constipation and migraine headaches. They are high strung persons. As they grow older it is noticed that they are ambitious and exacting, and are hard task masters who try to do a great deal in short time.

Emotional Upset

In all of these conditions, emotional upsets are important factors. Hence, in treating high blood pressure the mental condition must receive attention. The patient's life must be so adjusted that he is free, insofar as possible, from worry and strain. At the same time he must be reassured about his condition, for the more he worries about it, the worse it is likely to get.

The three R's which describe the treatment for high blood pressure of this type are: Relaxation, Reassurance and Readjustment. Persons with high blood pressure may go on living many, many years if their lives are properly planned.

A Painful Kidney Ailment

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ONE OF THE most painful disorders that affect mankind is renal colic. The condition starts suddenly and the pain is sharp, usually beginning in the back and passing downward into the groin and lower part of the abdomen. However, not all cases are typical. In some instances the pain may be in the back or in the lower part of the abdomen alone.

The most common cause of renal colic is the formation of a stone in the kidney. The pain occurs when the stone passes from the kidney down the ureter, which is the tube that leads from the kidney to the bladder. However, there are other causes and it should not be assumed that when renal colic occurs a stone must be present.

Determine Source

In each instance of renal colic it is necessary that the patient be completely studied to determine the source of the trouble. A complete study includes a careful physical examination and X-ray plates of the kidney, ureter, and bladder. To make the latter, the doctors inject a certain substance into a vein and after some period of time take the X-ray plates. The material is excreted into the kidneys

Shoe Rationing To End Suddenly Industry Claims

New York, Oct. 16.—Rationing of shoes will be ended, suddenly, without previous announcement of the government, sometime in the next future," the Shoe Leather Association of the Tannery Council of America declared today.

"We shall demand a 'buying plan' for leather shoes," the council said, "and we shall demand that the government should not buy shoes for its own use."

The council also has proposed that the government should not buy shoes for its own use.

the added variety will bring a swift, resulting buying movement" or consumers may delay immediate purchase of shoes "because they feel that the rationing is not large."

The council further said that it anticipates that the rationing of shoes will be ended by the removal of rationing, which will become effective with the new shoes in 1945 in both men's and women's shoes.

In women's shoes, the choice of color will be considerably greater while in footwear for men, double soles, the wing tip and plain toe styles will be in demand, the council said.

As to quality, the industry group said consumers may expect as good or better shoes than they enjoyed prior to 1941, and prices will represent "normal, basic values" since prices "have not gone up with the general cost of living."

Shoe rationing was inaugurated suddenly by the OPA in February, 1943, freezing the sale of shoes on Sunday, Feb. 7 until Tuesday, Feb. 9, with a stamp in war ration book one the first shoe ration stamp.

Put yourself in These shoes...

YOU'RE A SOLDIER, out there where the chips are down—you're lonely and tired, and your nerves aren't all they might be... How about an easy chair, and some good music—or a small talk with real American girls from home—or a bang-up Camp Show with Broadway and Hollywood stars in the flesh? The U.S.O. brings all these things to you through the National War Fund.

OR YOU'RE somebody's kid sister... not really bad, just bewildered. Home isn't what it used to be, with Dad and Mother both working—you're left too much on your own, with too little to do—and somehow, values seem to change in wartime. You'd stand a swell chance of drifting into trouble if it weren't for the wholesome recreation and understanding guidance you get from community social services.

LET'S SAY you're a small fry. You don't remember much about your Dad, except that he wore a soldier suit when he went away, and you don't see much of Mom because she has to work every day... but that's nothing for you to worry about! The Community War Fund sees that you get nursery and hospital care, and supervised play, and lots of other important things that help to give you the right kind of start in the world.

OR PERHAPS you're a Belgian—or a Greek, a Czech, a Chinese—burned and blasted out of home and family... sick, destitute, starving. Shall you die, for lack of a friendly hand? Not if free men can help it... and they can help it, through the National War Fund. Allied Relief Societies supported by the Fund provide warm clothes, shelter, food and medicines—yes, and frequently hope itself.
