On Basis Of Need

Every one can appreciate the desire of Kinston people to keep the Marine air station on the outskirts of that city. While we have not seen the installation, we are certain it is the last word in such construction, for your Uncle Sam doesn't mess around by halves. Such an air field would be an asset par excellence for any community to possess.

If the Marines have no further use for it, however, Kinston or Lenoir county, or both, should have the right to take it over, and perhaps they shall be given the privilege.

What is being agitated, however, is for the government to continue to maintain and operate the field at its own expense, and news stories have said nothing about the need. That would seem to be the basis and the only proper basis, though, for continued government operation. This is not said with the idea of trying to frustrate Kinston's ambitions for a modern air field. Its desires are readily and thoroughly understood.

But if every installation built during the war is to be continued by government operation, regardless of necessity, and other similar and different costs are to be carried on all hope of a balanced budget has as well be abandoned. These things cost money and will require large sums in peacetime as well as during the war.

Judge Kerr's assistance has been enlisted in behalf of Kinston's ambitions, and he has promised to go to bat with Washington authorities to the end that the air field may be retained. The congressman's desire and need for Lenoir county votes against his opposition is natural, and from that standpoint his attitude can be understood.

One wonders, though, if all thought of necessity is to be thrust to the winds, and if local pride is to have precedence over a balanced Federal budget and the spending of the people's money.

reached in any endeavor, and persistence often brings the rewards sought. The band has for many years been one of Henderson's finest advertisements, and the community has given its support to the organization out of pride and appreciation. The two together can scale even greater heights and almost certainly shall.

The glee club is not as old as the band, nor does it include as many young people, but it reflects credit upon the vocalists and their director from year to year. It could be of more service if more provision were made for its instruction and if larger numbers of students were enrolled. They would learn much more, too, about this art to their own advantage, culture and enjoyment.

This year's records are outstanding in competitions that have been had. The records in composition the greater the honor. And there was plenty of both in the contests last week. Henderson takes justifiable pride in the extra-curricular activities of its high school students.

Will Demonstrate Blue Mold Control Here On Thursday

Two public demonstrations in spraying tobacco plants to control blue mold have been arranged for Thursday, April 11, at which Howard M. Harris, extension plant pathologist of N. C. State college will be present to direct the demonstrations and discuss the methods of blue mold control. J. W. Sanders, county agent, announced today.

Mrs. Sanders called farmers' attention to the experience with blue mold last year, cautioning them that now is the time to prevent a repetition of this by using proper control methods.

The first demonstration will be held at the community plant bed site one mile east of Henderson on the fairgrounds and the second at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

Farmers who will not be able to attend either of the demonstrations are asked to contact the county agent's office for information on control of blue mold and other tobacco diseases.

'HOT' SUBJECT

Raleigh, April 9.—A mounting flow of complaints to OPA from rate housewives that they were being "overcharged" on fresh green peppers brought today from Theodore S. Johnson, State OPA Director, a reminder that there are no price ceilings on fresh green peppers, or on canned ones, either.

The housewives said they were being charged 20 to 30 cents apiece for peppers. But OPA's answer was that it had no control over the price since ceilings were removed three months ago in line with the policy to discard controls on items not considered significant in the cost of living.

Normally, at this time of the year, Johnson added, green peppers sell at prices ranging from 10 cents apiece to three for 25 cents, or higher than in other months.

A Lift For Today

It is our belief that as he has performed well in military life, so will he command himself to the new life before him."

1945 GOOD YEAR FOR POULTRYMAN

Raleigh — Curtis Tarleton, statistician with the N. C. Department of Agriculture, says that the egg-feed price ratio last year was the most favorable that farmers of this state have experienced since the beginning of the war.

Tarleton points out that poultry feed in 1945 cost an average of $3.45 per hundred pounds, while eggs averaged 40.4 cents per dozen, or enough to buy 12.5 pounds of feed. He explains that the average cost per 100 pounds of poultry ration in 1941, for instance, was $2.17, while the price per dozen eggs averaged 24.4 cents, giving an egg-feed price ratio of 12.2 — 12.22 pounds of poultry ration was equal in value at local market prices to a dozen eggs.

In 1942, the egg-feed price ratio was 12.1; in 1943, 12.2; and in 1944, only 10.4. Tarleton attributes the decrease in 1944 to an increase in the average price of feed and a decrease in the price of eggs. The cost per 100 pounds of poultry ration during 1944 averaged $3.52, while the average price per dozen eggs was 33.9 cents.

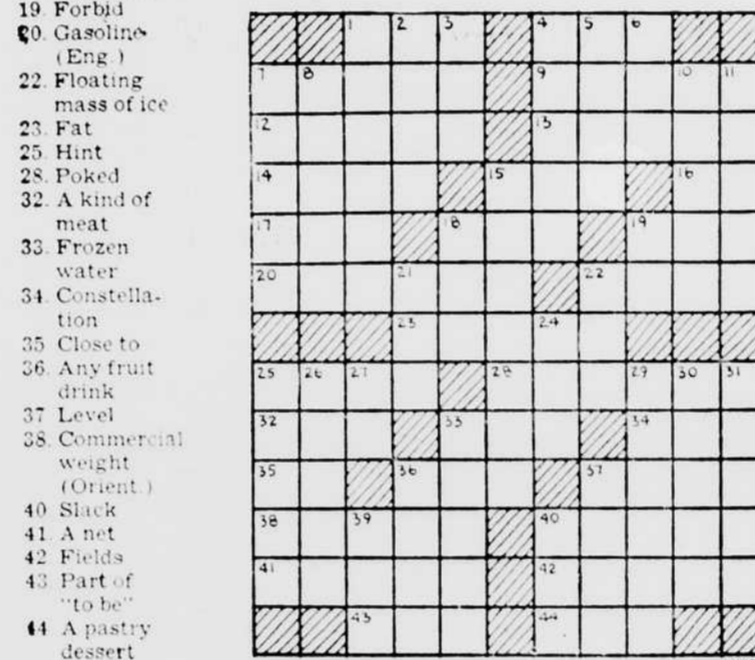

INLAND FISHING TO CLOSE APRIL 6

Raleigh — Sport fishing for warm water species in the inland waters of the Piedmont and Eastern Carolina will be closed from April 6 through May 19, both dates inclusive. Season runs through April 14 in mountain counties, according to a reminder from Dr. Willis King, State Fish Biologist.

During the period it will be illegal to fish by any means in any of the creeks and small rivers of the state. However, lakes and larger impoundments designated for commercial and year-round fishing will not be affected. C. D. Kirkpatrick, Chief of Law Enforcement for the Division, has reminded the game and fish protectors to be alert for viola-

East South West North Pass Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass 3 NT. Capt. A. S. Haussler, of the Marines, was South at one table of the duplicate tournament where this hand was dealt. Having passed on his first turn, he made a maximum bid on his next chance, and his partner, who had made the opening bid on a three-card suit, went the rest of the way to a No Trump game.

You can hardly imagine a man making two extra tricks at that contract, but Al Haussler did. West made his side's first mistake in opening the wrong card of his spade suit, the 4, when he should have led the J. That made the 9 taker of the first trick. When the club 2 was led, East helped simplify the problem by playing his

A, and made a third mistake for his side on the third trick by returning the hopeless diamond suit. The club 4 was led for a finesse of the J, and the spade 8 was led for a win by the Q after West played the 10. That play really set up a squeeze, as will later appear.

Next a heart was led to the K and A, and West got out of his hand with a diamond to the K. The diamond A also was cashed, then the club 10 finished.

Now ready for the squeeze, Capt. Haussler had the spade A, heart 10-6 and club K, and the dummy retained the spade 3-2 and the heart Q-5. West was holding the spade K-J and heart J-7, but was irrevocably squeezed then by the club K lead. If West had discarded a spade, dummy would have shed the heart 5, and the last three tricks would have been the spade A, heart Q and spade 3. But West discarded a heart, so dummy threw a spade, and the last three tricks were the spade A, heart Q and heart 5.

Emotional Conflict Resulting In Actual Physical Disorders

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FEW parents realize how all-important happiness is for the little child. Just as his growing body needs sunlight and fresh air, so his developing personality requires the atmosphere of love. But love means different things to people, and parents generally seem to have a tendency to confuse it with pride. This is a mistake which is completely disruptive of child-happiness because it spurrs parents to demand more from the child than he can give.

Forced Growth

A child cannot be forced into his various stages of growth. His nature must develop slowly from within and unfold gently like the unfolding leaf.

The child who lacks or who is pushed beyond his native capacities is likely to develop emotional conflicts. And emotional disturbances are reflected not only in deep-rooted personality defects, but in actual physical symptoms similar to those of disease.

Sometimes, there are grave behavior problems as well... bed-wetting, dirt eating, ties (repeated twitching of certain muscles), and a great deal of crying at night.

Repeated Headache

According to Dr. Herbert C. Miller, of Yale University School of Medicine, repeated attacks of headache in the absence of eye-strain, sinus infection, migraine and certain other disorders, are usually produced by conflict of the emotions or disturbing situations for which the child cannot find a ready solution.

He says, also, that attacks of pain over the heart lasting for a short time and accompanied by breathlessness may occur in children who have been pushed beyond their abilities by their parents. Sometimes, they may develop because a child has been forced to assume responsibilities too great for one of his years. Another cause is a feeling of insecurity because of disturbed home conditions or a feeling of not being loved.

Abdominal Pain

Perhaps the most common symptom due to emotional conflicts is pain in the abdomen. Such attacks of pain, even when accompanied by vomiting and constipation, may merely be an attempt on the part of the child to draw attention to himself.

In trying to determine just what is producing the emotional conflict responsible for the many symptoms, it is necessary not only to study the child's mental condition, but also emotions of the parents.

Parents so often make the mistake of not trying to find out just what the child's capabilities are, but instead, try to mold the boy or girl according to some pattern which they select and, usually, there is no stimulation given to the child to live up to these ideals of the parents. Such an attitude will bring on an emotional conflict which affects both child and parents.

Behavior Problems

In treating these behavior problems, it is important, first of all, to make sure there is no organic basis for the attacks as determined by a complete physical examination. Then, the parents must be made to realize that the child's symptoms are not due to a disease but, rather, to emotional disturbances. Thus, by the proper change in attitude on the part of the parents, a great deal can often be done to relieve the trouble.

Much can be done, also, to prevent these symptoms. The expectant mother should rid herself of superstitions and false notions concerning the raising of the child. She must not be afraid to handle the baby after it is born and she must not lose confidence in her ability to nurse him and care for him properly. A lack of confidence in the mother may easily be transferred to the baby.

If every parent would take stock of these things and realize that he must rid himself of his own emotional conflicts, fears and uncertainties lest they weigh on his child with crushing force, we would have better homes and fewer problem children.
