Worthy Honor

The Vance County Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs is meeting with the greatest interest in honoring Mrs. Hattie F. Plummer, the county agent in that field by sending a one thousand dollar loan right to aid worthy girls from the county in preparing themselves to carry on the work in which we they can example has been set for them by Mrs. Plummer.

So far as we know—and we think this is correct—Mrs. Plummer is the oldest home demonstration agent, in point of service, in the State. She has given some of the best years of her life to working with and training the rural women of this country in ways of betterment and progress and in making the farm home a more attractive and more delightful place to live in and to care for. The effort she has given will stand forever as a monument to her interest and her untiring energy and dedication in behalf of a happier and more prosperous farm life. Always one of the greatest grannies that can be paid to any individual is that the world is better because they have lived in it, and this can truly be said of Mrs. Plummer.

In thirty years Vance county has had only one home demonstration agent. Her services are known and recognized wherever this work is respected and honored in the State. The farm women of this county are not alone in their appreciation of her labors and her success. The entire county is grateful for it.

Girls from many farm homes here have distinguished themselves in the State and nation by their achievements in this field and alone the direct leadership and inspiration given by Mrs. Plummer. That is why the county organization is to be so highly commended in its efforts to establish a loan fund to encourage and further the work. These women will be assisted in their endeavor outside their own ranks, and all who may recognize the genuine service they are rendering to their county and its interests in

Respite For Draft

Passage by the Senate of the conference-approved draft extension measure is preliminary to its final adoption within a few days by the House. President Truman will definitely sign the bill and it will become law. It merely gives the draft a respite, however, and probably a continuance only six weeks, or until July 1.

Friends of the law, under which millions of men were uprooted into war duty during the late conflict, anticipate that at some time during the six weeks period another law may be provided after further deliberation, which will fix a definite policy with respect to obtaining the number of men the armed services say they will need. There is dispute over that issue now, as there has been for months, and advocates of the plan to let the act expire without renewal will certainly not be party to a scheme to restore it.

There are those who feel that all the men needed can be obtained from the ranks of volunteers, and who would like to see that means tried before going further. That has been our feeling all the while. Then, if more men are needed and cannot be obtained without a continuing draft program, there will be no other resource.

Congress hopes to adjourn for the summer and autumn within a month or six weeks, so that if the present law is extended there is no time to be lost in effecting the change. Odds against further action at this time include the congested and cluttered status of the legislative calendar in both branches of Congress.

Plucky Finland

It all the war-ravaged nations were as industrious and as eager to go to their own as is plucky little Finland, the food and rehabilitation problem for them and for the United States would be greatly simplified. The Finns are an energetic, ambitious race, and will ask no help except what is honestly needed. Americans will sacrifice and give with much more willingness what of their surplus lies there, and would do so in other countries likewise if a similar attitude were manifested.

Observers who have been in Finland say the country looks better than it did a year ago when the skirmish with Russia was only a few months old. Shop windows then boarded up now gleam with glass and empty shelves in the stores are not so numerous.

Travel still is difficult and only a couple of means can afford it, but the country's attitude toward Russia—one of fear and distrust—is unchanged. They are almost overwhelmed by Russian communists but seem to despise it and will have none of it as their very own. In eight years Finland must pay Russia $300,000,000 in goods as reparations. This means fifty millions this year but so far Finland is up to schedule in deliveries. There is no whining and begging for American charities there, in sharp contrast to other European countries. The Finns prefer instead to stand on their own feet and to be self-supporting as nearly as possible, and they are winning the respects of nations like the United States.

Finland threatens but the Finns are existing and struggling against it. In America many groups are not willing to fight but are moving in that direction. Here, the tendency is to do as little as possible for as much as possible; there, the motto is to do all possible whatever the ammunition. This is the type of people who, if left alone, will get along in the world and will become famous, as they have been in the past, the envy of less ambitious and less energetic peoples.

This Is The Pay-Off

When I was flying at lightning speed toward ten years and more two things went those who thought they had the Federal government's ears to the wind and that one day it would cap the whole world. Today those fears are being realized. Such a policy was not sound then and is not sound now—a fact which is becoming more and more evident all the while.

This is not to say, to be sure, that reforms were not needed. But reform and fanaticism are two entirely different things. Some of the first was needed, but not both, but we got both.

When John Lewis gave half a million dollars of his mine union funds to the Roosevelt campaign it was not his idea, nor did he have any right to do it. He always acted on his convictions, independent and courageous, never showing your true feelings unless they are pleasant. Before early this night before your birthday, returning early to your home, he carried with keys, tools, electrical devices and data, family. Inspiration may strike you with a good memory of money-making schemes. Be friendly with everyone today. A new acquaintance may become an important friend or a password in your talk, and a good companion. Follow the social laws of initiation of day, and be familiar with church words as well as with sheep instruments.

Vance Charge Meet At Gillburg Church

The second session of the annual conference of Vance Charge will be held at Gillburg Methodist church Sunday, April 17, at 10 a.m. At 10:30 a.m. at 11 a.m. with Rev. H. B. Bell offering presiding, it was learned by Rev. T. C. Polk, Political Action Committee is but another name of this same situation. It bodies good for the country in the long run, and the people as a whole will be ready for the creation and growth of this movement.

With a government that in the midst of this crisis sits supinely trembling in fear or helplessness or both, and submits to this sort of scheme, little permanent improvement is to be expected. Seizures of little nothing definitely or permanently; they only keep the wheels going temporarily. The nation needs desperately a concrete, practical working program that will be fair to both capital and labor, and continual peace need not be expected until something like that is fashioned.

FOOD BEFORE WHISKY

(Christian Science Monitor)
The executive order cutting down whisky distilleries' use of grain by 60 per cent during May is a humanitarian move. It means more American cereals will go into food and feed—for Americans and for the famine-stricken abroad. A minimum of workers would be displaced and practically no one would suffer in the least if liquor-distilling were prohibited entirely during this world-wide emergency.

By taking this step, the Department of Agriculture shows what it thinks of the contention of the distillers that the grain residue after fermentation has just as much feed value as the whole grain.

A Lift For Today

Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for My sake, shall save it.—Mark 8:35.

MANY THINK HAPPINESS consists of having and getting. The most obvious lesson in Christ's teaching is that there is no happiness in having or getting but only in giving.—Henry Drummond.

Our Father, may we learn by daily practice that in serving we not only please Thee, but also bring joy to others and to ourselves.

—Henry Drummond.
