trends on the Henderson tobacco market daily, and to keep the buying public informed in reference to merchandising possibilities throughout the tobacco selling season.

Boosting Cotton Also

Although the marketing of tobacco will be stressed in the booster program for the time being, attention will be paid from time to time to Henderson's live wire cotton market, which also is preparing to serve farmers in the surrounding area on a more complete scale than ever before. Two modern cotton gins will be in operation again this year, and complete buying and handling service for cotton growers will be maintained. Attention also will be paid to the marketing of other farm products in Henderson. Local merchants and farmer supply firms are in a position to handle any product grown for sale on the farm.

Experienced Warehousemen

Henderson's six warehouses will be operated by some of the most experienced warehousemen in the business this year. All of the members of the three firms which will operate on the Henderson market this year are well-known to tobacco growers in a 50 to 60-mile radius of Henderson. Many of them have been operating on the market here for years, and all of them have been in the warehouse business for varying lengths of time, gaining experience and prestige among tobacco growers through the years.

Each of the three warehouse firms will operate two warehouses this year, assuring greater coordination of service to the tobacco growers. Walter Abston and Noel Tuck will be manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the Farmers and Planters warehouses. W. B. (Billy) Daniel, Fred S. Royster, and A. G. (Bert) Moore will operate the Carolina and Coopers houses, and C. J. Fleming, Brooks Turner, E. C. Huff and Lyman Wilkinson will operate the High Price and Banner houses. All of these warehousemen grow tobacco on their own farms and know tobacco from the ground up.

Prospects Bright

Speaking of prospects for the forthcoming selling season, Boys W. Britt, sales supervisor, said: "We can confidently look forward to Henderson's greatest marketing season. Indications are that prices will be as high or higher than they are in other belts, and with careful handling of the crop these high averages should continue throughout the season."

"Geographically speaking, Henderson is the best situated market in northeastern North Carolina. A glance at a map will show that all principal roads lead to Henderson. As the principal marketing and trading center of a four-county area, and the gateway to the South's great flue-cured tobacco growing section, Henderson is ideally situated to serve thousands of farmers who need an established and reliable market for their farm products. To the end that Henderson might so serve the tobacco growers of the entire northeastern section of the State, elaborate plans have been made and will be carried out to guarantee highest prices for every load of tobacco, every bale of cotton, every lot of livestock, and every bushel of wheat and corn marketed in Henderson."

"In return," Britt continued, "farmers are invited to make Henderson their shopping headquarters. While some of the products, especially machinery, needed on the farm are scarce everywhere, if such products are to be found anywhere in this section of the state, they will be found in Henderson. Because it is this section's principal marketing, trading and banking center, Henderson is prepared to take care of the farmers' entire needs, for his family, his home or his farm."

Plan National Campaign For TB Tests By X-Ray

Raleigh, Sept. 11.—Preparations have been completed for a national anti-tuberculosis campaign to promote routine chest X-raying of all hospital personnel and of patients on admission, according to a statement issued recently by the American Hospital Association, the U. S. Public Health Service and the National Tuberculosis Association, joint sponsors of the program.

In a message to hospital trustees and administrators, the sponsors estimated that such a service among the 20,000,000 persons who annually enter hospitals and out-patient clinics would discover two or three times as many cases of tuberculosis as mass surveys among the general population.

Approximately 15,000 information kits describing the need for the service, as well as well as methods and costs of establishing it, are being distributed by the three sponsoring organizations to hospitals, health officers, and to tuberculosis associa-

WAA WON'T ISSUE JEEP CERTIFICATES

Charlotte, Sept. 11.—Almost coinciding with the announcement of increases in the veterans' set-aside list, War Assets Administration advises that there will be no further certification of veterans to purchase Jeeps, standard commercial-type trucks, tractors, and cranes. The reason is that certificates already issued are from ten to thirty times the number of surplus Jeeps, etc. available.

According to the Charlotte AAA Regional Office, these articles will remain on the list from which only veterans can buy, though because of the scarcity, only veterans previously certified may purchase as they become surplus. Like all set-aside items, they will be sold according to the dates of the veterans' priority certificates.

The set-aside list is popular with veterans because, except for CPA and FPHA, it is exclusively for them and they can usually buy it, not only for business, but for personal use. The list includes only extremely hard-to-get items which have been declared surplus to the War Assets Administration. Recent additions to the veterans' set-aside list include such scarce merchandise as binoculars, wrist watches, certain cameras and other photographic equipment, office machines and furniture, sleeping bags and life rafts.

The first woman senator was Mrs. Rebecca Felton of Georgia, who served one day in 1922.

High Price-Banner Unit Announces Entire Staff

Fleming Interests Will Run Same Two Houses As Before

Fleming interests will continue again the coming season to operate both the High Price and Banner Warehouses, with the same management and much the same personnel as the past several years.

The High Price Warehouse is located on East Montgomery street, with one of the largest floor space spreads in this section. The Banner is a block away on Zene street, and has accommodations for many thousands of pounds of leaf daily.

Proprietors of the business are C. J. Fleming, C. B. Turner, E. C. Huff and Lyman Wilkinson. All of them are widely known in the Henderson territory and have been active for weeks in planning for the coming auctions.

Every facility and convenience for quick service to growers is provided in the two houses, both of which are of easy access for wagons or trucks in bringing in leaf tobacco for sale.

The staff for the coming season, which will serve both warehouses, consists of the following, in addition to the owners:

Bookmen—R. E. Tanner, J. H. Pegrum, C. W. White, R. W. Boyd, Sidney Fleming.

Auctioneer—B. C. Griffin, of Bailey.

Floor managers—J. K. Parks, P. R. Hunt, W. H. Abbott, J. C. White, Jake Tanner.

Weighers—Irvin Greenway, Marvin Light, J. F. Coghill, C. B. Baskett.

The High Price-Banner organization is fully prepared for the start of the new season and the entire staff is to be on hand for the beginning of auctions on Monday, September 16.

Now that so many after-dark spots have given up their orchestras as too expensive, some of those night club brawlers will have to do their fighting without the accompaniment of battle music.

Cockroaches are called Croton bugs because they first became common around industrial water pipes in New York about 1842, when the aqueduct carrying water from the Croton river was completed.
