Were Married In Washington

Miss Frances Louise Gill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Gill, of Henderson, became the bride of Ralph Raymond Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Robinson, of Bennington, Vermont, in a double ring ceremony performed at five-thirty o'clock on September 7 at the Calvary Baptist church in Washington, D. C.

The wedding was solemnized on Saturday, the fourth of May, in Sanford.

Mrs. Clayton attended Zeb Vance high school and the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Clayton, a graduate of Zeb Vance high school, served three years with the armed forces and was in the European theater for two years. He is now employed with a tobacco company in Rocky Mount.

Mr. Robinson is a graduate of the Charles B. Aycock school and attended Louisville college. She is a member of Alpha Pi Epsilon and for the past three years she has been employed by the War Department in Washington.

Bulldogs Continue Victory March; Beat Chapel Hill 32-14

Henderson high school Bulldogs stacked up their second victory of the season last night in a win over Chapel Hill 32-14 on the gridiron here, fleet-footed "Bozo" Roberson crossing the goal line for three touchdowns.

The Orange county eleven, who out-first-dawned the Bulldogs 12 to 11, got in scoring position several times, but were pushed back by the Henderson team.

Four minutes after Chapel Hill took the opening kick from Henderson, "Bozo" Roberson took the ball around right end for the first touchdown of the game and Long kicked the conversion to give the Bulldogs a lead of 7-0.

The Orange county eleven fought back early in the second quarter, picking up a series of first downs en route by Butler and Hoening before Butler was pushed back by Remm for loss of eight yards and possession of the ball. Henderson took the ball on their own 42-yard line and Roberson and John Thomas ran a first down each. Thomas tucked the ball under his arm on the 16-yard line and went across the Chapel Hill goal for a touchdown. Long again kicked the conversion to make the score 14-0.

A few seconds before the end of the first half, Chapel Hill put the ball on Henderson's five-yard line, but the Bulldogs held strong and Williams lost five yards. A penalty on Henderson again put the ball on their goal-line and Butler stepped over for a touchdown. Hill converted and score at the end of the half was 14-7.

Coming back from the half, the Bulldogs kicked, but Chapel Hill failed to pick up a first down, handicapped by a 15-yard penalty for pushing. Henderson took the ball on the Chapel Hill 29-yard line and advanced it to the 20. John Thomas, who was right behind Roberson with two touchdowns to his credit, ran from the Chapel Hill 20 to down the ball across their goal line. There was no conversion and the score was then 20-7.

Chapel Hill surprised the Bulldogs with a passing attack to Linsberger, placing the pigskin on Henderson's 19-yard line. Butler ran the ball over for their second touchdown and also ran the conversion to make the score 20-14 at the end of the third quarter.

A fumble by Chapel Hill was recovered by Cattlett and the Bulldogs went on the march again. Roberson picked up eight yards, then four, John Thomas took the ball to the Chapel Hill one-yard line and Roberson made the touchdown. Long's kick was blocked and Henderson still led the game 26-14. Henderson's final touchdown came on the most spectacular play of the game, when Roberson took the ball from his own 29-yard line, where Butler's kick went out of bounds, and galloped 80 yards to score again for Henderson. There was no conversion and the score stood at 32-14.

Duke, State Meet Today

Raleigh, Sept. 28.—State's Wolfpack and Duke's Blue Devils clash in a football contest here at 3 o'clock today in the season opener.

State's reserves in the Riddick stadium have tagged Duke's Blue Devils, improved by the Blue Devils' improved offense. The boys in blue will give the Wolfpack a hard fight today, for Duke's offense is a well-oiled machine. Duke's offense is a well-oiled machine. Duke's offense is a well-oiled machine.

BLUE DEVILS TO BE MINUS BLUE PANTS

Durham, Sept. 28.—Those Duke Blue Devils won't look the same today at least not from the uniform standpoint. And all 22,000 people who jam Raleigh's Riddick stadium to capacity will notice that the Blue Devils are no longer "the boys in blue" but rather "the boys in blue and khaki."

Not since 1936 has the Duke team worn pants of any color other than blue. It took 10 years, a war, and the problem of reconversion to bring about a change, but the change is here, the Blue Devils will have to be satisfied with blue jerseys and tan practice pants for the game with N. C. State and possibly the first home game with Tennessee.

Duke's manager of the athletic supply room, R. L. Barnhart, has pointed out that new uniforms have been next to impossible to get. "Barnhart placed an order with manufacturers last spring as soon as it appeared that new uniforms would be available, but strikes and shortages of materials have forced a delay in production. Only last week Duke received word that sufficient quantities of yarn had reached the production line and that the Blue Devils might once again be "the boys in blue" when they take the field against Navy on Oct. 12.

The battered and torn pants which Duke has worn for the past five years are no solution to the problem. They've served their time and are now good for little more than fond memories of past battles.

But if the team looks unfamiliar in khaki pants, it will look more so in the new plastic-type helmets which the Blue Devils managed to acquire. The helmets were put into production as a substitute for the old leather helmets when the scarcity of leather became a critical. However, the new headgear is more durable than the old and weighs considerably less.

Leona Flood To Appear Here Soon

The West Coast, which has proven a fertile center for producing talented young artists, has scored again. Leona Flood, the brilliant young violinist who will be heard here Wednesday, October 30, matinee and night at High school auditorium presented by Henderson Lions club was born in Spokane, Wash. Like Heifetz, Miss Flood believes that the career of a concert violinist demands nerves of iron, so she is doubly grateful for the carefree years of childhood, spent in a country environment where she was known as the leader of "Our Gang". An only child, she was raised with eight boy cousins all of whom have served on battle fronts, including one, who gave his life over Tokyo in the first B-29 raid last December.

Before she could walk, Leona Flood was singing melodies, and at the age of two and a half she made her first public appearance as a singer, her first press notice appearing when she was three years old. It was taken for granted that she would be a singer. However, her mother, who was a well-known amateur musician, felt that singers should have a sound musical foundation. Since the best musician in the vicinity at that time was a well known violinist who had been a member of the Damrosch Symphony it was decided that she should have lessons with him. On her fifth birthday, Leona Flood arrived at the studio of Leonardo Brill with a quarter size violin under her arm, for the beginning of a career which somehow developed without intention.

RAY HULL GOES TO PAPER IN GEORGIA

Ray Hull, former news editor of the Henderson Dispatch, and until recently night editor of The Associated Press bureau in Charlotte, has gone to Gainesville, Ga., as editor and manager of the Gainesville Eagle, a weekly newspaper. It was learned here today. It is understood here he has acquired an interest in the paper.

Until going to The Associated Press last January, Hull was for two and a half years managing editor of the Kannapolis Independent. He worked on papers in Concord and Asheboro before coming to Henderson in 1940, and left here in mid-1943 to go to Kannapolis. Hull is a graduate of the University of Missouri, and is a native of Maryville, Mo., where his father now operates a weekly newspaper.
